People's Army Set to Fight Pollution Here

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A people's anti-pollution-conservation movement was born Wednesday night.

An audience estimated at 700 jammed a public meeting at the University of Victoria and called for action against the use of phosphate-containing detergents and pollution in general.

The turnout astonished Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson who has launched a nation-wide campaign against phosphate levels in detergents.

He organized the meeting and admitted the large crowd literally "stunned me."

"I had no idea that so many people were aware or understood the dangers of pollution," he said. "This is the beginning of a people's army to stop pollution and to save our land."

About 100 people were turned away because there were no more seats.

To accommodate the crowd, half the audience participated in a panel discussion on detergents in one amphitheatre in the Elliott Building and the other half saw a film on the misuse of land in another amphitheatre across the hall.

Members of the panel included biologist David Hancock, chairman; Anderson; Brian Roberts, a lawyer; Dr. David Groves, a biochemist, and Dr. Alan Austin, a biologist.

ACTION NEEDED

Anderson, who has recently introduced a private member's bill in the Commons that would limit phosphate content in detergents to 2 per cent, said public action is needed to awaken the government for legislation to control the use of phosphates.

Phosphates are building elements which feed algae in lakes and encourages them to multiply. When the algae dies it takes oxygen from the water, killing many forms of life.

The result is a green scum on the lake.

Anderson suggested several ways people might help fight pollution and the use of high levels of phosphate in detergents.

Some of these were:

- Picketing of all supermarkets in town, demanding that the companies print phosphate contents on the box.
- A pollution day to draw attention to the misuse of land, water and air.
- Protest meetings on the grounds of the legislature.

He also suggested that people turn out at the airport or Legislative Buildings when Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Greene arrives in Victoria to discuss the proposed Canada Water Act with Lands and Forests and Resources Minister Ray Williston, probably at the end of the month .

Kiernan Blames Publicity

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

CAMPBELL RIVER — Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan found his "silent majority" here Wednesday night when he downgraded the problems of pollution before 200 members of the Social Credit Comox constituency organization.

Kiernan made no mention of the area's two most potent political issues—the Western Mines tailings' dump at Buttle Lake and the Cape Scott-Strathcona Park land swap.

Instead he charged the news media with distorting the facts about the B.C. pollution problem and declared: "Let's not kid ourselves that we can be free of pollution and still have the high level of development and prosperity in B.C. today."

NOT A QUESTION

A question and answer period followed Kiernan's speech and not one of the 200 people present had a query or a comment.

He admonished the audience to start using their hearts and their heads "or you'll be led down a garden path. It's a mistake to be stampeded by facts in improper perspective.

"Take the open pit or strip mining stories. If you form your opinion by headlines it would appear most of the province is being torn apart.

"In actual fact only 27 square miles is being mined by open pit—so let's keep it in perspective."

ONLY FIVE AFFECTED

He said there are five mountains in B.C. whose shape is being altered by mining.

"There are 10,000 mountains we haven't touched—so let's keep it in perspective."

He said the auto is the most destructive pollutant in our society. The real offenders were not the factories but the automobiles.

"But if you were told to stop driving your car, you

PM Visit Paris? An Impossibility!

PARIS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, vacationing on the ski slopes of the French Alps near Courchevel since Monday, said today he will not visit Paris before returning to Ottawa Sunday because of "diplomatic impossibilities."

Trudeau indicated to reporters that there still exists in the Canadian capital a sour feeling over the refusal by a French official to visit Ottawa during a tour of Quebec province last year.

Turdeau told reporters he had wanted to visit France last year but decided against it.

"It was difficult; the General (Charles de Gualle) was still there. . . ."

NOT SURE

He made little comment on his relations with French President Georges Pompidou, saying only:

"I met him a long time ago. We chatted, but at the moment, I do not exactly know what we could say to one another."

In London, meanwhile, the Evening News says that "fast footwork and fast thinking" by the Canadian embassy in Paris prevented an awkward meeting between Trudeau and Jean de Lipkowski at Orly Airport this week.

ANOTHER REASON

De Lipkowski was in the Paris airport's VIP lounge awaiting the arrival on a different flight of officials from Quebec, The Evening News says.

A meeting between the two men was avoided when the Canadian embassy found a lounge for the prime minister at a nearby airport hotel.

The News says this enabled de Lipkowski to have the airport arrival lounge at his disposal without causing Trudeau to meet the man who possibly was the person he least wanted to see in France.

In Hong Kong, the newspaper China Mail says Trudeau will meet Peking officials in Hong Kong late in May to discuss Canada-Communist China relations.

However, an external affairs department spokesman in Ottawa said Trudeau may stop in Hong Kong after visiting Expo 70' at Osaka, Japan, but that "there are absolutely no plans for political discussions of any nature.

Ray Refused New Trial

In a unanimous opinion, the court said that Ray "willingly, knowingly and intelligently and with the advice of competent counsel entered a plea of guilty to murder in the first degree by lying in wait."

Ray pleaded guilty last March 10 to the 1968 slaying of King in Memphis. Chiminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle sentenced Ray to 99 years in state prison.

Socred Urges Exhaust Device

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social Credit MLA Evan Wolfe (Vancouver Centre) said today he will ask the provincial government to make exhaust emission-control devices mandatory, on all new cars sold in British Columbia.

Mr. Wolfe, a Vancouver car dealer, said he would also like to legislate the efficiency of such devices by requiring regular inspections.

Building Trade Facing Shutdown

Cement Dry-Up, Wage Pacts Blamed

By JIM HUME

The British Columbia cement workers strike is only the opening salvo in what could be the construction industry's toughest year.

With $25 million in Greater Victoria construction halted or grinding to a halt and a minimum of 1,000 on-site workers nervously eyeing the immediate future, 12 other major unions are gearing for negotiations with management over the next three months.

The effects of the cement workers' strike, now in its fourth week, have been relatively minor until this week.

"But," says Ed Phillips, executive director of the Amalgamated Construction Association local branch, "a total close-down of major jobs now appears inevitable.

"Some of the sub-trades will be able to carry on for a little while, but eventually they will catch up and the whole industry will grind to a halt," Phillips said. "I'd give it another week, maybe 10 days at the most."

Phillips said he could only guess at the number of men enployed on major projects, but would estimate that close to 1,000 "on-site" workers would eventually be affected.

"And I think this is only the start of what could be a very rough year," Phillips said.

Before the end of February, three other major union-management agreements are up for negotiation. They are the laborers' agreement, teamsters and operating engineers.

In March eight agreements, all of vital importance to the industry, are up for negotiation. They affect ironworkers, machinists, boiler makers, electricians, pipefitters, bricklayers, glaziers and sheet metal workers.

And in April the carpenters go to bat for their 1970 demands.

This year, for the first time, the industry will be represented at the bargaining table by its new creature—the Construction Labor Relations Association.

Tough, Prolonged Battle

With professional negotiators carrying the fight for management and strong demands from unions, the 12 battles scheduled for the next three months are expected to be the toughest and most prolonged in the construction industry history.

"We'll have to wait and see just how it goes," Phillips said. "But it isn't going to be an easy spring. And, of course, a strike by any one of the 12 would again affect the entire industry."

In Greater Victoria the following jobs are expected to be halted within a few days.

Glendale Hospital ($5.5 million); the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at View and Douglas ($6 million); Phase two of the Hillside Shopping Centre ($3 million); University Heights Shopping Centre ($2.5 million); and the Toronto Dominion Bank at Douglas and Johnson ($5 million).

Also scheduled to run into trouble within the next three weeks is the hardly off the ground new aquatic facility in Central Park.

It is expected that excavation on the site will take between two and three weeks.

Construction experts say that following settlement of the strike it will be at least three weeks before supplies of cement start to move in any volume.

INMATES GET 'FIX' WHEN THEY WANT IT

VANCOUVER (CP) — An ex-convict testified in Provincial Court Wednesday that he and other prisoners were able to "fix" with heroin at the British Columbia Penitentiary and the Matsqui Drug Centre.

Tommy Burns, one of two ex-prisoners appearing as defence witnesses for Ronald Soo, said the prisoners were able to fix in their cells or wherever they happened to be working.

Soo, 36, was convicted of possessing heroin for trafficking and will be sentenced Jan. 15.

Both Burns and the other ex-prisoner, Ronald Spence, testified that they knew Soo was an addict while all three were serving time at Matsqui and the penitentiary.

Israeli Jets Pound Arabs

BEIRUT, Lebanon (CP)—Israeli jets swung into action on three Arab fronts today, downing three Syrian planes, striking at Egyptian military targets and pounding guerrilla bases in Lebanon, the Israeli military command said in Tel Aviv.

The Syrian planes, Soviet-made MiG-21s, were intercepted as they tried to attack Israeli positions in the occupied Golan Heights.

In Damascus, Syrian pilots claimed they had shot down two Israeli Mirage fighters in a 10-minute dogfight over Syrian territory today. A military spokesman said three Syrian planes were hit but did not indicate whether they had crashed.

Israel now claims to have shot down 17 Syrian planes since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Other Israeli aircraft flew over the southern and central Suez canal, hammering Egyptian war objectives in two raids lasting a total of almost two hours, the Israelis said.

Planes also swept into southern Lebanon to bomb and strafe Arab guerrilla camps on the western slopes of Mount Hermon, the military reported. It was the second raid on Mount Hermon in three days.

Israel said its planes returned safely from all missions.

Israeli planes Wednesday flew to within 20 miles of Cairo to bomb a network of military camps in one of the deepest penetrations into Egyptian territory since the six-day war of June, 1967.

REPLACE ARMY CHIEF

The Israeli air attack on Lebanon today came a few hours after Gen. Jean Njeim took over command of the Lebanese armed forces with a mandate to strengthen the security of the border areas, menaced by Israeli reprisal raids.

The 54-year-old general was named Wednesday night to replace Gen. Emil Bustani, who signed the Cairo agreement last November with the Palestine-Arab commandos after a national crisis over the question of their freedom of movement in Lebanon.

Njeim knows the mountainous southern region well. He served for two years, from 1966 to 1968, as commander of the southern military district, which now is being regularly hit by Israeli planes, artillery and raiders in reprisal for commando attacks across the frontier.

Informed sources in the Lebanese capital of Beirut said the switch in the military leadership does not herald a change in the government's attitude toward the Cairo agreement, which ended two weeks of clashes between commandos and security forces in which more than 150 persons died.

But Njeim will be told to enforce more strictly the terms of the agreement, the sources said,

Secrecy Urged For Paris Talks

PARIS (Reuters) — The United States today proposed that the Vietnam peace talks go into restricted and secret sessions. Hanoi and the Viet Cong turned down the idea.

American delegate Philip Habib said secret sessions would enable the talks to "get to grips" with the real issues at stake.

Under present procedure, the prepared statements of all four delegations are issued to the press. Habib's proposal would have had the effect of keeping these secret.

"We had sought to bring an end to the kind of sterile debate that has been going on in the past but the other side is not prepared to agree to our proposal," Habib told reporters after today's 5½-hour session.

ICY MASS MISSES ISLAND, LOWER MAINLAND

Few Areas Escape Freeze

Times News Services

Vancouver Island, southern coastal B.C., Hawaii and just a few areas of the United States and Canada escaped the winter miseries today.

The remainder of the continent — and Britain as well — were being touched and even hurt by freezing temperatures.

CORONATION WINS

Medicine Hat and Coronation, both in southeastern Alberta, had record low temperatures for Jan. 8 as Arctic air moved into the eastern half of the province.

Medicine Hat had a low of 30 below zero, breaking the previous low for the date of 23 below, set in 1934. Coronation was the cold spot in the province this morning with 31 below, setting a record for the date. The previous record was 29 below, set in 1950.

Hawaii was the only state not touched by freezing temperatures this morning. Sub-zero readings reached across the lower plains states, eastward to New England and westward to the central rockies.

Tourists in Miami saw the thermometer drop near the 30s. Dallas had early-morning readings in the 20s. The east coast had readings in the lower teens and even California had freezing temperatures at higher elevations .

New England and the mid-west were really cold.

Chicago had an official temperature of 4 below zero at 2 a.m. But the wind, at 15 miles an hour, sent the apparent temperature — called the chill factor — plummeting to about minus 40 degrees.

Havre, Mont., had the nation's lowest 2 a.m. reading — 23 below zero. The highest in the 48 adjacent states was 57 at Key West, Fla.

The U.S. weather bureau said the chill could be expected to last at least through Friday and possibly into the weekend.

Florida faced the weather with tourists in mink instead of bikinis. Fruit pickers faced the frost and citrus growers used smudge pots to protect their crop.

Britain remained in the grip of a cold snap with transportation in major cities crippled and heat and power supplies cut.

A butcher in Driffield, Yorkshire, found it eight degrees warmer in his refrigerator than in the street.

The temperature was down to one degree in Glasgow — sharpest cold in that Scottish city in 30 years. City buses froze Wednesday night and thousands had to find other means to get home.

Doctors' Income $38,675 in 1967

OTTAWA (CP) — The average gross income of physicians in private medical practice rose nearly 10 per cent in 1967 to reach $38,675, the health department reported today in an analysis of taxation statistics.

The increase of 9.8 per cent was the largest in 10 years and compared with an increase of 7.4 per cent in 1966 over 1965. In the 10 years from 1957, physicians' earnings rose 85.9 per cent.

The report also showed that expenses of medical practice rose by 5.2 per cent in 1967, but expenses fell as a proportion of gross earnings to 32.5 per cent from 34 per cent in 1966.

The figures relate to physicians whose main source of income was in the form of fees paid for personal medical services. Excluded are doctors whose gross earnings come mainly from salaried professional practice or from non-medical sources.

"Physicians average net earnings from all sources increased more rapidly over the period from 1957 to 1967 than the earnings of other self-employed professionals separately identified by the department of national revenue," the report said.

Their gross earnings rose by 18.6 per cent in New Brunswick and by 15.7 per cent in Alberta in 1967, but over the 10-year period the largest advances were 7.1 per cent a year in Quebec and 6.9 per cent a year in Ontario. Smallest advances over the decade were 4.5 per cent a year in both Nova Scotia and Manitoba.

(On the basis of the 8.5 per cent annual average income increase, the private practitioner's gross income projection for this year would be a total of $48,536.)

SCHEDULES INVOLVED

"New schedules of fees introduced by provincial medical associations in several provinces during 1966 and 1967 contributed towards increased earnings of physicians in those provinces," the report said.

"In addition, a number of medical care insurance plans, including Physicians' Services Inc., in Ontario and the Alberta health plan and Medical Services Inc. in Alberta, increased the percentage of the listed fees actually paid to physicians."

Altogether, $686,200,000 was paid to physicians for personal medical care services in Canada in 1967, amounting to $33.63 per capita, compared with $605,200,000 and $30.24 per capita in 1966.

Search Ends For Eighth Boat Victim

The search for the body of eight-year-old Heidi Meyer, missing since Saturday, after a boating accident that killed seven of her companions, has been called off.

The girl and the 22-foot pleasure boat in which the group were travelling have not been found despite an intense search in the Campbell River area. The bodies of the other seven victims were recovered Monday.

Saturday afternoon a funeral service will be held in the victims' home community of Black Creek. The bodies of Harry Dirks, 42; his children, David, 19; Arthur, 17; Tim, 15; Grace, 11; Linda, 10, and family friend Jimmy Falk, 13, will be buried.

Grain Crisis Meeting Requested

Provincial Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford today called on the federal government to convene an emergency meeting on the grain crisis in Western Canada.

He said the meeting should be held in early February with representation from the federal and provincial governments, the Canadian Wheat Board, farm organizations and grain companies.

The possibility of setting up a Canadian agricultural expert council to "explore all possible markets for Canadian agricultural products should also be considered," Shelford said in a written statement.

He pointed out that many producers feel international sales programs lack "aggressiveness."

Shelford said special study should be given to a plan whereby producers would contribute to a self-supporting fund from which withdrawals would be made in a poor price year and payments made into it in a good price year.

specifically the condition that commando units should operate only in border areas where there are no civilians or military posts.

This clause in the secret agreement was designed to limit Israel retaliation against Lebanese targets for commando attacks.

There were these other developments in the Middle East:

Contacts are taking place among Egypt, Syria, Iraq, Jordan and Sudan to fix the date of a second summit meeting of their heads of state, the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram newspaper reported.

The meeting, scheduled to take place in February, would be preceded by a series of preparatory meetings, including meetings of the defence and foreign ministers of the five countries, Al Ahram said.

The United States handed over the Tabia Field at Wheelus Air Force Base to the Libyan Air Force, completing the first stage of its evacuation of the big base outside Tripoli. The U.S. has agreed to be out of the base by the end of June.

Baghdad radio announced that Iraq, Egypt, Libya and Algeria signed an oil co-operation pact which they said was a "first step toward freeing Arab oil resources from foreign monopolies "exploiting the oil riches in the Arab world."

A communique did not outline any concrete plans to end the concessions of Western companies operating in the four countries.

At the Vatican, Pope Paul sent a message for peace to the heads of state of Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Israel.

The messages were sent to mark World Peace Day which the Pope asked the world to celebrate Jan. 1, a Vatican spokesman said.

He did not specify what the messages contained or on what day they were sent.

Calgarian Is True Grit—Socred Style

CALGARY (CP) — Jack King, a director of a Calgary federal Liberal constituency association, has been elected president of the Social Credit organization in the provincial Bow Riding.

King, who joined the Social Credit League Dec. 24, intends to retain his federal ties and will seek an executive post in the Calgary Centre Liberal Association at a meeting tentatively set for Feb. 11.

"I do not find the two hats inconsistent at all," he said in an interview Tuesday.

"I believe in Social Credit principles and feel Premier Strom is doing a fine job. I am also an adamant federal Liberal."

He had searched the constitutions of both parties and found no prohibitions about holding one card provincially and one federally.

The business of party labels had been blown out of proportion.

Plant Closed Down

TRAIL (CP) — Cominco Ltd. said this week its chlor-alkali plant has closed down here because contracts for chlorine and caustic soda ran out, forcing transfer of 20 men. New markets are being sought.

2 MORE FACE MY LAI PROBE

SEATTLE (AP) — The United States Army announced today that Sgt. Charles E. Hutto, 21, of Tallulah, La., has been charged with premeditated murder and assault on a Vietnamese female in connection with the alleged massacre at My Lai, South Vietnam on March 16, 1968.

Hutto was the second soldier charged during the day and the fourth charged in connection with the American assault on the coastal hamlet.

Earlier, Pte. Gerald A. Smith of Chicago, who is based at Fort Riley, Kan., was charged with premeditated murder and "indecent assault on a Vietnamese female" at My Lai.

Also charged in the case are Lieut. William L. Calley, 26, of Miami, who is at Fort Benning, Ga., and S. Sgt. David Mitchell, 29, St. Francisville, La.

Ginter Charges Deal Fixed Brewer's Area

Prince George brewer Ben Ginter produced a letter before the Royal Commission into drinking laws and practices today which referred to a 70-year-old "gentlemen's agreement" between B.C. breweries not to encroach on each other's territories.

Ginter said the letter was from the chairman of Interior Breweries to an Edmonton man and the part he quoted referred to "an old understanding" dating from "the turn of the century" on the division of marketing territories among unspecified breweries.

The letter brought a repeated denial from Col. Donald McGugan, B.C.'s one-man Liquor Control Board for 18 years until retiring last spring, and from William Bruce, the current acting chairman, that the board knew of or condoned any sort of "gentlemen's agreement."

Both McGugan and Bruce repeated again they have never received any instructions on changing draft beer accounts from former Attorney-General Robert Bonner.

Ginter's appearance before the commission today was to allow him an opportunity to receive and have clarified written answers to questions he submitted to the Liquor Control Board at an earlier stage in the commission hearings in Vancouver.

Last September Ginter, president of Tartan Breweries, submitted a 30-page brief accusing breweries of using subterfuge to persuade hotel owners to switch beer brands.

The brief also charged that four major breweries had a "gentlemen's agreement" to protect Interior Breweries in Creston.

The agreement effectively closed the Kootenay market to his beer, Ginter claimed.

The hearing is continuing.

Anderson feels that the Water Act should have more teeth in it to prevent pollution of Canada's lakes and rivers.

Some of these suggestions will be considered by an anti-pollution committee later this month, he said.

The audience was impressed with the film "Multiply and Subdue the Earth" made by the University of Illinois and depicting the destruction of North America's environment.

The film spares neither local nor senior governments for their lack of concern over the mis-use of land and water.

SAME HERE

Members of the audience felt points raised in the film were applicable to the Saanich peninsula where good farmlands are being gobbled up for housing development, parks alienated and streams polluted.

Commented G. M. Terry: "What is happening in California is happening here."

Lawrence Chambers, farmer: "I doubt if people have the intelligence to do something about pollution. They will kick if a tiny worm is found in a cabbage, but say nothing if it is sprayed with DDT."

Ruth Enke, writer: "An issue of Beautiful British Columia should be published showing the underside — the other side of beauty. No one plays that up."

Pamela Jones: "More meetings should be held like this to inform the public of what is happening to our environment.

Brian Roberts: "Detergent companies have grown complacent like fat, lazy pigs. Until they realize that individual citizens actually are concerned, they will do nothing . . .

"They've grown complacent and we have to put pressure on them. It's not the politicians' fault. It's our own."

At the end of the meeting bumper stickers saying "Phight Phosphates" were distributed to members of the audience.

They also agreed to send postcards with their views on pollutions to energy, Mines and Resources Minister Greene and Lever Bros., one of the largest manufacturers of detergents.

would naturally shout: 'A dictatorship.'

"We're all aware of the problems but are we prepared to give priority to sewage when we could put that money into schools, roads or housing? It's up to us. If we feel pollution is a priority, then we must be prepared to pay, not just to talk."

'WHERE POSSIBLE'

He said factories dump a large quantity of noxious chemicals into the environment and said that where methods are possible this action should be eliminated.

The government had not found the answers yet to many of these problems but "are we prepared to shut down industry while we are finding these answers and face the ensuing economic problems?

Peterson Doubts Loophole

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said today he isn't sure that legislation is required to plug what Vancouver police have called a loophole in the province's compulsory insurance law.

Vancouver authorities said Wednesday there is no clause in the legislation to put the onus on drivers to show proof of insurance.

This would enable drivers to escape with a $10 fine for not showing proof instead of a minimum $250 fine for not having the insurance.

Peterson said Vancouver police, the only police force to encounter such difficulty with the new law, should try harder to cover the alleged loophole.

If there is a loophole, it will be closed at the coming legislative session, Peterson indicated. Discussions between his department and Vancouver authorities were under way.

"There are provisions in the Summary Convictions Act, for instance — and this is a summary convictions' offence — which indicate the onus would be on the person accused if he is charged with not having insurance to prove that in fact he did have insurance," Peterson said.

Employers Ask Labor To Help Fight Taxes

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Employers' Council of British Columbia today invited labor to join it in fighting tax changes proposed in a federal white paper issued last November.

Branding the paper "the white plague," council president F. G. Peskett of Vancouver said: "This is one time we'll be more than glad to share a common bed with labor."

At a provincial industry department conference, he added:

"I believe the whole country will suffer severe damage if the white paper proposals are enacted, but no province will pay more heavily than British Columbia.

"It isn't enough, apparently, that we already supply the golden eggs. Now Mr. Benson (Finance Minister Edgar Benson) wants to cook our goose too.

"In a country crying for greater business and industrial incentives, we have a government proposing to reduce these incentives through a sociological document disguised as a taxation instrument. In so doing, it will, incidentally, increase its own income."

Routes Reopened

YALE (CP) — The CP Rail main line was reopened Wednesday night after being buried under 10 feet of debris in a landslide. The Trans-Canada Highway was reopened earlier. CP Rail's westbound passenger train, The Canadian, was diverted to CNR track and was delayed six hours.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The storm off the Oregon coast continues to circulate moist air over B.C. and skies are generally cloudy throughout the province. This storm now shows signs of weakening and only a few showers are expected to reach southern B.C. ahead of it.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The way you feel when you are outdoors playing or working depends on the amount of moisture in the air. In the wintertime, when the mercury tells you that the temperature is below freezing, you will probably enjoy the cold if the weather is relatively dry. But if it is shiveringly damp you will want to go inside and stand in front of the fireplace.

When the air is dry you can ski or chop wood or shovel snow with a certain amount of zest; depending, I suppose, on how deep the snow is or how much chopped wood is needed. But when the air is humid—especially if it is hot and humid—you will probably describe it as oppressive or sticky, or even heavy. You don't feel like working in an atmosphere of high humidity, even in the colder wintertime.

Three Possible Endings Seen for War in Biafra

By SUZANNE CRONJE
The London Observer

LONDON — A new peace initiative in the Nigerian civil war may be attempted this weekend on the occasion of the national day of Cameroun.

Cameroun's President Ahmadou Ahidjo, who is the current chairman of the Organization of African Unity is reported to have invited both the Nigerian and Biafran leaders to attend the celebrations. Other important visitors expected are the secretary-general of the United Nations, U Thant, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, who is chairman of the OAU consultative committee on Nigeria, David Newsome, U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, and Maurice Foley, a junior British minister who usually handles Nigerian matters.

Biafran sources in London have been unable to confirm the invitation to Biafra, but it is thought unlikely that Biafran leader Gen. Odumegwu himself would be able to attend while his breakaway country is under heavy pressure from Nigerian troops. A truce is unlikely despite Emperor Haile Selassie's New Year appeal for a cease-fire of at least a week. The Nigerian leader, Gen. Yakubu Gowon, said recently that a cease-fire or truce "will come at our time and on our conditions."

Nevertheless, recent diplomatic efforts may bear some fruit. U Than'ts three-week West African tour will end on Jan. 19 in The Ivory Coast, which has recognized Biafra and is thus in a position to inform the secretary-general of the Biafran point of view. It is probable that he will meet senior Biafrans in Amidjan, The Ivory Coast capital, despite Biafra's rejection this week of his appeal to the Biafran leadership for "magnanimity" in agreeing to negotiate on the basis of the OAU resolution calling for a cease-fire and negotiations designed to preserve Nigerian unity. The Biafran reply to Thant said that his appeal was "meddlesome" and tantamount to a demand for surrender without prior guarantees of Biafran security.

But it is still possible that some formula might be found as a basis for talks, particularly since the views of the British and American representatives who are being sent to Cameroun still carry some weight in Lagos. U Thant is under pressure to act since the Dutch government last month promised the Dutch parliament to take the issue to the Security Council.

Moreover, Thant's visit to The Ivory Coast will coincide with a debate in the Sierra Leone parliament on the possible recognition of Biafra. Siaka Stevens, the Sierra Leone prime minister, said this week that feelings in his country on the war were very strong and that the decision on recognition would be taken before the end of the month.

Stevens, who handled the preparations for the abortive peace meeting which was scheduled to take place in Addis Ababa last month, also said that he had stressed in letters to the two sides that "The OAU resolution should not be allowed to stand in the way of negotiations" because both Nigeria and Biafra had agreed to talk without pre-conditions.

Gen Ojukwu claimed that he had been assured that talks would take place outside the context of the OAU—a matter of some importance since the failure of last month's peace attempt was due to confusion over this very point.

The Sierra Leone attitude will therefore have some bearing on next week's efforts to bring the two sides together, particularly since Emperor Haile Selassie is expected in Sierra Leone on Jan. 15.

Stevens says hhe believes it would de "a pity" if Nigeria were to succeed in the current military offensive since a victory could not solve the conflict: "African wars are not like European wars; in Africa if one side wins the losers just vanish into the bush and carry on."

The Nigerian war therefore seems likely to take one of three courses: political settlement during early peace talks; a failure of the current Nigerian offensive, in which case the situation may remain unresolved for many more months; a Nigerian victory followed by a long disruptive guerrilla war.

The congregation in West Africa during the next few days of top-level representatives from Africa, the United Nations, Britain and the United States may provide a chance of achieving the first of these developments—a peaceful solution of the conflict.

Moon Samples Undermine Old Theories of Origin

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The moon may have formed from a mineral-laden cloud boiled away from the earth in primordial times, an Australian scientist says.

Dr. A. E. Ringwood of the Australian National University said Wednesday his studies of Apollo 11 moon samples make "the traditional theories of the moon's origin look very, very shaky right now."

In his presentation to a lunar science conference, he suggested the moon may have formed when the sun boiled away earth minerals, forming "a massive primitive atmosphere." The atmosphere dissipated and cooled. Silicates formed a mass of small bodies orbiting earth. These later united to become the moon.

The theory was attacked immediately by two other scientists.

Dr. Donald Wise of the University of Massachusetts said the moon could not be in its present orbit if it had formed from a sediment ring about the earth.

FINDS IT IMPOSSIBLE

Dr. John O'Keefe of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said that it was not possible for such a cloud of minerals to have generated enough velocity to have gone into orbit around the earth.

The three traditional theories of the moon's origin state:

—It was a body moving through space which was captured by the earth's gravity.

—It formed in the same way and at the same time, but apart from, the earth.

—It is a great chunk of earth which was spun or thrown into orbit by an explosion.

"I think it's too early to judge any of the theories," Wise said. "All of them have their Achilles heels."

Wise said he favors the concept of the moon coming from the earth.

Yugoslav Blood Feud Claims Another Man

PRIZREN, Yugoslavia (AP) — For three years the Taci family stayed indoors to escape the vengeance of the Mazreku family. Then Becir Taci ventured out to the family's vineyard—and lost his life.

The two families live in the village of Mamusi, near this southern Yugoslav town. Three years ago, some of the Taci clan killed two of Saban Mazreku's sons. Under the tradition of this part of the Balkans, the killing entitled the Mazrekus to two Taci lives.

The 180 members of the Taci clan confined themselves to their homes in an attempt to stay alive. They denied themselves all normal outside activities. The children were not allowed to go to school.

But on the last day of 1969, 23-year-old Becir Taci believed the Mazrekus were busy preparing for the New Year holiday.

He decided it was safe to take a look at the family's neglected vineyard, to see what could be done to save it from ruin.

While the young man was there, word got to the Mazreku family.

Saban, now 65, got a German machine-gun he had hidden away and went to the vineyard. He fired 18 rounds point-blank into Becir.

The killing was a setback to efforts officials had been making to reconcile the Taci and Mazreku families and to end the vendetta code that blood must be repaid with blood.

The district judge ordered six members of the Mazreku family arrested, but other townspeople say there will be no peace until the Mazrekus kill a second Taci and avenge Saban's other dead son.

Sharper Focus in Camera

THE QUESTION OF SECRECY in municipal council meetings is a perennial one here and it is time that ground rules were established for this highly controversial manner of conducting the public's business. The Municipal Act states that "The Council shall hold its ordinary meetings openly, and no person shall be excluded, except for improper conduct. If in the opinion of the Council the public interests so require, it may by resolution exclude from any special meeting all persons other than its members."

That apparently leaves a large enough legal loophole for councils who seek it, even though for most people a "special meeting" would be one specially called and not merely a portion of an ordinary meeting. But the matter of what "the public interests so require" is vague and it should be much more closely defined, if necessary by an amendment to the Municipal Act.

Admittedly, it is a good thing for municipal councils to have as much autonomy as possible. But it is equally advisable, as a principle, that their actions should be as open to public scrutiny as possible. There has grown up a small body of topics which are widely recognized as appropriate for discussion in closed meeting.

Discussions of a person's qualifications in consideration of employment or promotion or salary increases are clearly best carried on in camera. Discussions of proposed purchases of real estate, where premature publicity could result in escalation of the price, also require privacy. And one or two other examples may be added to the list. But it would be better if the list were formalized and made official, so that councils would be restrained in their resort to secret debates.

It is notable that some councils have achieved a reputation for in-camera meetings, and some of these gatherings might have difficulty in being classed as "special" within the meaning of the Act. The fact that some councils in this area habitually resort to closed meetings while city council almost never does implies a criticism of the procedure and a question as to the necessity for such action. The aldermanic challenge heard this week, that if the people do not like in-camera meetings "they can throw us out", comes with less bravery a day or two after the installation of the new councils than it would a day or two before the voters went to the polls.

We are in a period when all who are concerned about the democratic process deplore the apathy of municipal voters. Only a small percentage of eligible voters turns out to the polls; public attendance at council meeting is sparse, almost non-existent. If mayors and councils foster the impression that the public's business is a matter only for experts and that the less the members of the electorate poke their noses into it the better, then these elected officials must bear a large share of responsibility for the lack of public interest in local government. Resort to in-camera procedures should be a matter of necessity, not of personal preference or casual choice. In view of the "special" nature mentioned in the Municipal Act, they should be a rarity rather than a matter of routine.

Sino-Soviet Accord Doubtful

AFTER SEVEN WEEKS OF fruitless talks last year, Soviet and Chinese negotiators are going to try again but the prospect of Sino-Soviet accord seems distant. China wants the talks limited to specific border questions while the Soviets insist on unlimited subject matter covering the whole spectrum of Sino-Soviet relations.

Chinese government officials have said they are willing to use the old border treaties favoring Russia as a basis for determining boundary lines between the two countries once and for all. These agreements, going back to 1858, ceded huge tracts of Northern China to the Russians and extended Soviet control to the Sea of Japan. Offering to use these treaties as a basis for discussion is a large concession for xenophobic China and seems to indicate a Chinese willingness to end basic differences.

But Soviet insistence on widening the talks to include ideological issues may mask a desire to keep the Sino-Soviet dispute boiling. Under the present Chinese rulers, the idea of Soviet hegemony over the Communist world is unthinkable and certainly non-negotiable at the conference table. China may agree to a widening of the talks if only to bargain for time.

At present China is probably incapable of carrying on a sustained war with the Soviet Union. Chinese manpower is far out-weighed by Soviet industrial capacity. Growing Chinese industry is vulnerable to nuclear attack, including China's own nuclear capacity located in Sinkiang province.

Apart from talking and mending political fences with the West, China does not have many choices. Realizing this, the Soviets may turn the screw a little harder at the new talks. It is difficult to understand the Soviet motives under these circumstances. Certainly a war with China is not in the best interests of the Soviet Union now. And if the Chinese decide that no possiblity of a settlement exists along the 4,500-mile common border the Soviets may not have the opportunity to backtrack.

Cigarette Advertising

THERE IS BY NOW LITTLE doubt that cigarette smoking is injurious to health. The Commons Health Committee recommendation that all cigarette advertising and promotional spending be eliminated in Canada four years after the enactment of any such legislation is a measure of the public's concern over the issue. The tobacco industry complains that government is trying to strangle tobacco interests and dictate the customs of Canadians. It adds that cigarettes have been convicted on the basis of guilt by statistical association.

Perhaps. But with all its research the tobacco industry has not been able to match the impressive medical statistics that condemn cigarettes. And Mr. Paul Pare, president of Imperial Tobacco Co. and chairman of the industry's committee on smoking and health, has not indicated that the tobacco industry will take any voluntary steps to restrict advertising and promotion.

In the United States a Federal Communication Commission request that broadcasters ban cigarette advertising has met with some success. Last May, however, the Commerce Committee of the United States House of Representatives voted to bar limitations on cigarette advertising for six years. If a Canadian ban were enforced, cigarette advertising would still pour into Canada from United States magazines and electronic media, negating any Canadian legislation and discriminating against our own tobacco industry.

This would make the well-intentioned Canadian recommendation largely unproductive. Clearly, any effective curb on cigarette advertising will have to be continental in scope. But the accumulating evidence of the health statistics, plus such voluntary restrictions as have already been applied, indicates that eventual action to abolish the costly and omnipresent depiction of smoking as necessary to a full life is on the way.

"If you need me . . . make sure you're really needy . . ."

Wage Freeze

In British Columbia, due to the great power of the construction labor union monopoly, pay rates (including massive fringe benefits) in the industry have risen four-fold since 1948. Cost of living index by two (doubled) and general wages and salaries of other employees in B.C. by two (doubled).

If a wage freeze is necessary, why not tax any further increase in rates already higher than the average 100 per cent, and other wages or salary increases 100 per cent above a 5 per cent increase?

To be fair, this should also apply to prices. Tax excess profits as they did in wartime. We must stop inflation and cannot count on understanding by labor unions. This, as you know, was proven by their recent action.

Construction in many categories in B.C. is already hard hit and if the new, huge demands in labor rates as forecast by the unions are forced on unwilling contractors, the results will be disastrous.—M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra Street. Street.

Reviewer Reviewed

I have seldom read so inadequate a review of such an excellent movie as Peter McNelly's account of "Oh! What a Lovely War" in the Times, January 3, subtitled, Protest Can be Fun. Good movies are very scarce and a reviewer should at least be able to recognise one.

This is a superb, very evocative recreation of the atmosphere and war of 1914-18. Owing to the swift changes of pace and scene — from phantasy to realism and back again — not all the audience followed the subtlety and meaning all the time, but the movie never faltered. Nothing in it was unnecessary, and much of it was overwhelming; i.e. the fraternization on Christmas Day; the wounded arriving at Victoria station. I will not spoil the plot for people who have not seen it, but splendid uniforms, impeccable manners, accurate and beautiful costumes, and great condescension among the wealthy towards their servants further enhance the drama.

It is unquestionably one of the best movies ever made about the First World War. It is not fun. It is not pleasant. It is brilliant and very moving indeed. If you see it, you will certainly not "go home and forget about it." If you are old and fought in that war, this is perhaps one of the most eloquent memorials to you and to them, the lost generation.—Mrs. G. J. Odgers, 345 Foul Bay Road.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

Everybody's Friend Just by Accident?

THE prime minister, during a brief holiday in the South, became a victim of the gremlins who work in the East Block. For countless years it has been the practice of our governors, and those who would like to be our governors, to issue messages of hope, inspiration and cloudy prophecy at this season. It is obvious from their contents that they are written not by those whose names they bear but by dedicated public or political servants in a spirit of resignation or of eagerness to get home.

Western

They serve a purpose from the standpoint of news editors because they help to offset the usual tales of arson, highway slaughter and mislaid gunboats associated with our midwinter festival.

This year, with Mr. Trudeau absent in the Gulf of Mexico, someone (possibly expecting a redundancy notice) saw his opportunity and seized it.

Sandwiched between the inevitable paragraph about our "untapped potential" and a favorable reference to our "traditional freedoms" is this cryptic sentence:

"In part because of accidents of history and geography, we enjoy good relations with almost all members of the international community."

To set this revelation in context, the thought that follows should also be examined. The next sentence reads: "We are not saddled with natural disasters at home or costly wars abroad." It is then pointed out that we are healthy, well-nourished, do not suffer from over-population, enjoy high educational standards and have access to great natural wealth.

Unfortunate Omission

Clearly, there ought to be another "in part" but, regrettably, we enter the new year without it. One can only assume that, in comparison with happy accidents, it does not amount to very much.

It seems to me that, in default of some substantial peace offering (a reprieve, perhaps, for one of his doomed embassies), Mitchell Sharp would be fully justified in resigning forthwith.

So far as the public is aware our foreign policy, whatever it may be, is intended to promote good relations with other members of the international community. If we have any secret designs on Francophone Africa or Latin America, ministers have been highly reticent about them. On the other hand, our benign purposes have been the subject of innumerable speeches by Mr. Sharp and all his predecessors.

It has been generally understood also that some planning goes into this. On the evidence of official statements, we stand ready at any time to assist the great powers with resolutions or formulae and we have set an example, as Mr. Trudeau only recently pointed out, by employing our warships for the latest B and B purposes.

But now, with a single sentence, the illusion we have all cherished is abruptly shattered. Some ghost writer of the East Block establishment, casually dismissing external affairs and all our high-priced diplomats, attributes our good relations with other countries to "accidents of history and geography," apart from other factors too minor to mention.

What would the situation have been if we had not been able to rely over the years on happy accident? If, instead, external affairs had set its mind to the task? Would the result have been natural disasters at home, costly wars abroad, and fewer redundancy notices because of the state of our disordered affairs?

There is perhaps one ray of light in this. The unknown East Block writer evidently has no patience with those (a substantial number nowadays) who have somehow persuaded tremselves that our geography, far from being a happy accident, is a catastrophic misfortune. Where we ought to be located they seem none too sure, but certainly it would be as far as possible from the United States in some cosy spot comparable to Czechoslovakia.

Stuck With Geography

In any case we are stuck with our geography, no one having as yet suggested a practical way of correcting it. Our faith for the future must be in historical accident which has evidently served us well in the past and may, if there is no interference from external affairs, see us safely through the 1970s.

Long before that time the iconoclast in the East Block will doubtless have gone to his reward; probably in the new office of government propaganda now being shaped by the planners in the same building.

FROM WASHINGTON

By JAMES RESTON

'Now or Never' Attack on Pollution

A GREAT deal is being made by the Democrats in Washington these days about the difference between President Nixon's soaring rhetoric on pollution control and his comparatively low budget requests to deal with the problem. On the face of it, the opposition party can argue that he is talking big and spending very little. He requested $214 million to help clean up the nation's waters in the current budget; the Congress finally appropriated $800 million; and it is not yet clear that the Administration will spend the extra money.

Reston

Nevertheless, Mr. Nixon declared the other day that "the nineteen-seventies absolutely must be the years when America pays its debt to the past by reclaiming the purity of its air, its waters and our living environment. It is literally now or never."

Despite this difference between language and cash, however, it would probably be a mistake to put the contrast down to political hypocrisy. It is only in the last year that Mr. Nixon, like many other Americans, has come to realize that a population increasing by over two millions a year and an indifferent industry expanding even faster are poisoning the atmosphere of the nation and raising vast new political as well as social problems.

Accordingly, he is said to be devoting a major part of the forthcoming State of the Union message to the pollution problem and to the reorganization of local, state and federal governments to deal effectively with the larger appropriations he intends to request in the next budget.

Mr. Nixon is not a fisherman like Herbert Hoover, or a hunter or conservationist like Teddy Roosevelt, but he is from California, where pollution has been a lively political controversy for years, and Ed Muskie, who could be his opponent for the presidency in 1972, is one of the real experts in the Senate on this vast and complicated subject.

In signing the bill to create an Environmental Council to advise the president in this field — as the Council of Economic Advisers assists him in the economic field — Mr. Nixon has at least assured that experts will be watching all executive and legislative actions for their potential influence on the environment.

"Ignorance and Avarice"

Lord Ritchie-Calder, writing in the current issue of Foreign Affairs, defines pollution as "a crime compounded of ignorance and avarice," and he noted that the ignorance often exists at the very top of civilized governments simply because all the implications of government decisions are not clear to the men at the top.

For example, Prime Minister Clement Attlee, who concurred in President Truman's decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima, wrote in "Twilight of Empires" sixteen years later:

"We knew nothing whatever at that time about the genetic effects of an atomic explosion. I knew nothing about fallout and all the rest of what emerged after Hiroshima. As far as I know, President Truman and Winston Churchill knew nothing of these things either . . . Whether the scientists directly concerned knew or guessed, I do not know. But if they did, then so far as I am aware, they said nothing of it to those who had to make the decision."

This may, as Lord Ritchie-Calder observes, sound absurd, since H. J. Muller had won the Nobel Prize in 1927 for his evidence of the genetic effects of radiation, but it is merely one dramatic illustration of a fact well known to anybody who has been around Washington or Westminster in the last 30 years, namely that governments are constantly making decisions without any serious study of the side effects of their actions.

Early-Warning Post

Now, at least, there will be an early-warning post in the White House, and some expert advice on how money can be spent effectively in attacking the total problem rather than as has happened often in the past, wasting it on piecemeal projects.

Besides, the new Environmental Council will serve, as the Economic Council does, as an educational agency, not only for the Administration, but for the Congress and the public as a whole.

The real conflict will come between a conservative Administration's natural instinct to conserve and the opposition to expensive decontamination projects among the Republican party's supporters in American industry.

If Mr. Nixon sticks to his now-or-never battle against pollution, however, he will find a very large and powerful constituency in the public and the press at his side. This is one of these projects which, if well organized and financed, can be a major goal for the bicentennial celebrations of 1976, but it will have to be co-ordinated and pushed hard in the next few months, and the indications here are that the president intends to do just that.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"BUT I LIKE OUR FURNITURE BETTER. IT'S NOT SO DARN NEW!"

Looking Back

From the Times of Jan. 8, 1910:

The only silver-lead smelter in operation in British Columbia, or indeed in Canada during 1909, was that of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada at Trail, says G. O. Buchanan, visiting here from Kaslo. The mines that have shipped lead ores during the year are all, with one or two exceptions, in East and West Kootenay. "The output is increasing steadily and the outlook for 1910 is very promising," Mr. Buchanan said.

No Defoliated Border

Thousands of miles of the "friendly unprotected border" between the United States and Canada will be defoliated if the International Boundary Commission has its way.

The border between East Germany and the West, with its barbed wire and watchtowers, is a shameful monument to man's hostility towards his fellow man. The 20-foot-wide ecological deathstrip which is to reach from the Atlantic to the Pacific, killing all vegetation, leaving an ugly scar on the landscape will be another example of man's senseless destructiveness. For whose benefit? Does it improve the quality of water, air and soil? Does it protect our endangered wildlife? Does it give inspiration to people who love nature's unspoilt beauty? Does it benefit the taxpayer who is told by his government to use restraint to help to fight inflation? Does it provide a healthier environment for future generations? No!

This vile project can only be in the financial interest of those nameless ones who own shares in certain chemical products. Let us not passively stand on the sidelines when a small group of men is getting ready to destroy something which belongs to all of us!—Herta Hartmanshenn, 11060 West Saanich.

Lord Nelson: Death Wish Or an Authentic Hero?

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN

LONDON — Few things are held sacred in Britain today. One of them, however, is Lord Nelson.

There still survives a cult of this tiny, vain, theatrical, very human and humane man. It is not so much his consummate seamanship or his formidable victories that drove Napoleon's French off the seas, it is some quality in the man, an ability to make people love him, to inspire utter trust. (He was also invariably successful.)

When news of his death reached London 14 days after the Battle of Trafalgar The Observer lamented "the noblest admiral who ever wielded the naval thunder of Britain." There is no other hero to compare him to in British history.

Cat Among Pigeons

When therefore The Times recently published a long article suggesting that Nelson had sought death at Trafalgar, where on October 21, 1905, he was shot dead, the readers of The Times, at least were outraged. This was putting the cat among the pigeons of Trafalgar Square.

There began one of those voluminous correspondences in which letters are fired off like broadsides and which makes The Times the accepted place of battle for scholars and gentlemen.

The writer of the article, Dr. Henry Durant, gave a number of reasons why he believed the death was an elaborate suicide.

Dressing for battle, Nelson did not put on his sword, which meant he could not defend himself if his ship were boarded. He insisted on putting on a long, full-length coat with heavy epaulettes and four bright Orders embroidered on its chest.

He refused to give up the point of danger for his ship, The Victory, which led one of the two columns of battle to crash through the French and Spanish fleets. When a bullet, fired from the rigging of the French ship Redoubtable, mortally wounded him, he fell to the deck — smiling.

He said either: "They have done for me at last" or "They have done it at last," and if it were the latter it had a satisfied air.

He was worried about how to support his mistress, Lady Hamilton, and his natural child, Horatia. He saw the prospect of no more great battles at sea, and only a long retirement on shore at half-pay. He had made a codicil, asking his country to look after the two he loved, and he said goodbye to them four times when he left England for the last time.

Saying farewell to one of his captains, Blackwood, he ended: "I will never speak to you again." He was depressed about his health.

More than that, a gypsy had been unable to foresee Nelson's life after the age of 40, and he had signed his last letter at the bottom left of the page, which, according to graphologists is a sign of a potential suicide. That did it.

Who Needs Sword?

An historian of the battle of Trafalgar wrote in to say that the last letter contained the words: "I hope in God that I shall live to finish my letter after battle." He also said, why bother with a sword when your right arm is missing?

As for money trouble, the battle Nelson was sure of winning would make him rich in prize money, and the nation at that time was generous to spectacular victors. As for his sartorial display, this was customary. Admiral Collingwood did the same at the head of the other column: so did the French Admiral Villeneuve.

An admiral wrote that Nelson was an extraordinarily fit man, though going blind in his remaining eye. His organs at the post-mortem were found to be sound, though small, and anyway, 48 hours after his arm was amputated at Santa Cruz we was writing letters with his left hand.

A properly choleric vice-admiral wrote: "Can Dr. Henry Durant, with your aid, do no better than endeavour to destroy the character and reputation of the greatest and most-loved Englishman?" and "The doctor may have studied his life, all I can say is 'with scant success' ".

Lady Longford, the historian of Wellington, said that if Wellington had been killed at Waterloo the same might have been said of him. He had been reckless. One of his staff officers lost an arm beside him, and another a leg — "Damn it sir, I've lost my leg!" "Damn it, so you have sir!"

Others thought that Nelson suffered a premonition of death, and some wrote in to say that young officers going up to the front in the First World War knew when they were going to die. Statistically, of course, any officer feeling that way was, in the end, likely to be proved right.

It was generally agreed that Nelson's reckless display was part of his character and mystique. He was only doing his duty, and there was a strong suggestion that Dr. Durant had failed in his. It was a sharp engagement, and on the whole the letter-writers won — though not perhaps quite as decisively as the British at Trafalgar.

Sweden Miners Buck System

By ROLAND HUNTFORD

STOCKHOLM — A wildcat miners' strike in Sweden has the makings of a threat to 30 years of peace on the labor market, and the end of institutionalized central bargaining that has become an example to the rest of the world. Utopia is threatened— or is it?

By most standards the strike is ludicrous. Few workers, anywhere, have it so good. The miners have all the latest devices, many of them automatic, with control no harder than working with a sewing machine.

The mines are well run, welfare services are excellent. Mine galleries are spacious, and transport to the work-face is by underground bus. Rates of pay are between 13 kroner ($3) and 20 kroner ($5) per hour, and most pit men earn about 2,500 kroner ($600) per month; high, even by Swedish standards.

The Good Life

And it is an under-privileged miner who does not have both a well-appointed flat and a cottage out in the country, with as much shooting, fishing and skiing as he cares to have. For the mines are at Kiruna, north of the Arctic Circle in Lapland, with wide open spaces as one of the main attractions of employment.

Ostensibly, the strike is over marginal irritations. One of the issues is that pit-face workers are compelled to leave their cars (often Mercedes Benz, Porsche and other status makes) out in the freezing cold, while the company allows white-collar workers a heated garage.

But, in fact, this is a good symbol of what the strike is really about; a revolt against the Establishment, which in Sweden means the government, the trades unions and the civil service. It is a protest against centralization; it is the French students' revolt of May, 1968, in another form.

More than 4,000 miners have downed tools; over half the total number in Sweden. Their employer, the LKAB company, is nationalized, which means that they are striking against the Social Democratic government, in power for almost 40 years on a mandate of looking after workers' interests. Meanwhile, private mines go on working without a breath of complaint.

Under the established process of central bargaining, the LKAB managers and the miners' union negotiate a settlement in Stockholm. But this time the miners refused to listen, and demanded direct talks with the employers and the union officials in Kiruna— nowhere else.

The LKAB headquarters are in Stockholm, 1,000 miles to the south, and the mines scarcely ever see the management. Similarly, the union leaders keep mostly to the capital; and the miners have thereby become estranged from their own official representatives.

The situation is exacerbated by the structure of Swedish society. Sweden is, to all intents and purposes, a corporate State, with the LO (Landsorganization, the Swedish TUC) one of the governing institutions.

Since the Social Democrats have been in power for so long, by a natural process of politics the unions have grown increasingly bureaucractic. Their structure is rigidly hierarchical, and the chairman of LO, Mr. Arne Geijer, has a position in Swedish society coeval with that of the Prime Minister, Mr. Olof Palme.

Mr. Geijer is usually treated with the reverence paid to a medieval Cardinal— for he has both temporal power and personal prestige, but the Kiruna miners have shown him scant respect.

The Kiruna miners, then, have been made uncomfortable by centralization and the development of the corporate state. Other workers, notably in the docks at Gothenburg, and in the motorcar industry, are also restive, for approximately the same reasons. It is not the employers who are in trouble, but the state and the unions. The question is, does this presage the break-up, not only of the central bargaining system, but of the present structure of society?

Many Swedes would like to think so. People mainly of the extreme Right and Left, are supporting the miners, because they see in them rebels against the system. And it is a common saying that at least the strikers have dared to put into practice what many people are only thinking.

Majority Control

But anything like a revolution is virtually unthinkable. Sweden is populated and ruled by a compact majority, whose first instinct is to recoil from those who break out of the consensus. So the authorities, paradoxically enough, will have a fund of good will released by the Kiruna strike.

But, on the other hand, the government and the trades unions have grasped that there is considerable discontent, which will have to be assuaged. In the past, they have had to deal with similar situations, and there is no reason why they should not be able to do so in the future. What they will probably do is to carry out some measure of decentralization, to promote the idea of equality and improve the communications between the rulers and the ruled.

This may involve a modification of the central bargaining system, but certainly not its disappearance. The only uncertainty of the strike is its political effect. There is a general election due in September, 1970, and a small swing could put the Social Democrats in opposition.

But this seems unlikely. Probably what is in store for Sweden in the 70s is more Social Democratic rule, and more radical trends to prevent any recurrence of the Kiruna strike.

Another Crunch Coming on Commons Rules

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — A bitter battle over how the House of Commons should handle the nation's business is brewing between the government and the opposition.

Government House Leader Donald Macdonald has made an hour-by-hour analysis of the progress of public business before Christmas. He has concluded that there is no chance, at the present rate, of completing all the major legislation planned for 1970.

He fears that unless Parliament speeds up soon, bills which should be processed before summer will have to be carried over into the fall session, and the whole government program will then begin to back up in the Commons as the 1972 election draws nearer.

Macdonald will be putting the pressure on MPs when they return after the recess on Monday but the official opposition is in no mood to cooperate.

Conservative House leader Gerald Baldwin denies there is any political strategy of holding up government business. But he frankly admits that the opposition feels no responsibility to help speed the legislative program.

Baldwin says the Tories went out of their way at first to co-operate with Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's new government because it had a mandate to introduce its policies. But the reward was a new Commons rule book imposed by Macdonald and Trudeau to restrict the rights of the opposition.

So, now the Commons is back in the familiar and frustrating position in which there is only a minimum of co-operation between the government and the opposition to keep the wheels turning — slowly.

The House leaders of the four parties meet regularly to discuss the timetable in the Commons, but they rarely make an effective agreement.

Even when the opposition leaders are willing to make a deal with the government to put through an item of business, they are often repudiated by their own backbenchers who see no reason to limit debate.

Macdonald has become increasingly irritated with these pointless private negotiations and is considering a direct appeal to the public.

His analysis shows that of the 41 sitting days in the House from the beginning of the last session to Dec. 19, nine were spent in the general debate on the throne speech, five were allotted to the opposition to raise issues of their own choosing, and 27 were for government business.

After allowing for the daily question period, private members' time and other routine matters, these 27 days, in fact, provided 96 hours for debate and decision of government business.

In this period, only nine bills passed through all stages in the Commons. None of them was of major importance, and most were housekeeping matters which had to be attended to within a specified time. Three of the bills, for example, were implementing the budget decisions announced last June, another wound up Expo accounts, and an emergency bill provided for financial comptroller to guard the funds of the Company of Young Canadians.

Another five bills passed second reading in the Commons and went to committee for detailed study. Debate on several other matters was started, but not concluded.

MACDONALD

This is a depressing record of achievement when matched against the government's program and expectations. On the opening day of the session, the prime minister tabled a list of 71 bills to be handled, and two have been added since.

Of this total of 73, 40 bills have been given first reading—that is, introduced to Parliament and printed, ready for action. But only nine have passed.

So 64 bills remain to be completed in the Commons before the summer recess in June, plus emergency items that may have to be added to the list, as well as non-legislative matters such as a six-day debate on the spring budget, two or three days of debate on constitutional reform and 20 opposition days.

Macdonald is considering laying the whole problem before parliament and the public soon after the House returns.

He would point out the slow progress made so far and suggest a tight timetable for the remainder of the session.

The opposition would certainly reject such a timetable and deny responsibility for the failure to process more bills before Christmas.

Tories and New Democrats accuse ministers of spending too little time in the House, preferring instead to give speeches around the country. They also argue that Trudeau and Macdonald don't understand how to make the Parliament work.

They add the valid point that while Macdonald insisted on forcing through his Rule 75-C as a means of scheduling legislation, he is not using it, and is proving they were right all along in saying the rule was not only obnoxious but unworkable.

The public would then have to decide which side to support and to pressure—the government and its case for limiting debate and pushing through the program, or the opposition and its argument that the government is inefficient and dictatorial.

All governments, of course, tend to accuse their oppositions of obstruction. And all oppositions like to denounce ministers as arrogant bureaucrats contemptuous of Parliament.

What neither side ever seems to consider is that the real blame may lie not with each other, but with the machine. There is accumulating evidence to suggest that the Parliamentary system simply cannot handle the growing workload of modern government.

There are about 155 sitting days in a year. Of these, 90 to 100 are available for government legislation. According to informed estimates, the passage of a bill takes an average of two and a half days. So about 40 bills would be a reasonable year's program, instead of the 70 or more now required.

Efforts are being made to speed up business by getting time-consuming debate on detail out of the Commons and into committees. But even the committees are now becoming choked up.

Macdonald's analysis shows that the house took five whole days and part of a sixth day—19 hours— to put through the annual CNR finance and guarantee bill, a routine measure. Members on both sides took the occasion to have a wide-open debate on transport which often degenerated into discussion of parochial issues: for example, the quality of recorded music on CNR buses in Newfoundland.

Days in the House could have been saved if the bill had gone to the transport committee. But the committee was too busy with other issues.

So when the government and opposition next clash on control of the House and its business, the public might ask not which is right in the particular circumstances, but whether Parliament itself can serve the national needs in the seventies.

'Opossum Shrimps' in the Bag

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL

In our very cursory survey of the crustaceans there still remains for consideration the most important subclass of all, that which includes the crabs, shrimps, crayfishes, lobsters and a whole host of lesser forms which share certain anatomical features with them.

The larger members of the group are familiar to most persons because many of them are used as food or they have come to notice for other reasons, but the smaller ones are practically unknown to the layman and yet they are an important part of the sea's economy.

This assemblage of animals is distinguished from other crustaceans by a number of structural peculiarities too technical in nature to consider here. Chief characteristics are that the head is merged with the thorax and the combined divisions sometimes form the main part of the body as in most crabs.

Usually, also, there is a large single covering called the carapace to enclose or to partly protect this part of the animal, and there is an abdominal division to which may be attached legs or other appendages.

However, as usual there are so many variations to this basic body plan that it is not possible to generalize. Some members of the group differ from the typical form to such an extent that even experts disagree as to their true relationship.

One of the lesser groups of some importance is the mysids or "opossum shrimps," so called because the females have a brood pouch in which the young are carried until they are large enough to fend for themselves.

Most mysids are small, seldom more than half an inch long but they may occur in such numbers that they form a large part of the diet of fishes and other eaters of plankton. While most are marine one species, Mysis relicta, is fresh-water in habit but since it is usually found in lakes that have some connection with the sea it is generally believed that this crustacean is undoubtedly of marine origin, a relic as the name implies.

Mysis is particularly abundant in large, deep bodies of water such as the Great Lakes and here it was found to be a very important food source for fishes. Search has also disclosed that this tiny shrimp-like creature is present in some lakes in British Columbia but not in others.

Consequently in an effort to increase production of sport fishes such as kokanee, biologists of the British Columbia Fish and Wildlife Branch have introduced Mysis into certain of those lakes which lacked these crustacea. The experiment has evidently been successful; Mysis has become established and fish production has shown a marked increase.

Another related group of small crustaceans are the Cumaceans. These also usually escape general notice because of their minute size by like the mysids they are sometimes incredibly numerous.

Cumaceans spend most of their time buried in mud or sand and they range from the shallows to great depths in all parts of the world. Burrowing is facilitated by their bodily shape; the fore-part is enlarged and protected by an enveloping carapace while the abdomen is long and extremely flexible, apparently designed for driving the animal through the mud.

Males of several local species have the habit of emerging from cover and actively swimming in the water usually at night. If a light is shone into the water after nightfall great numbers of gyrating specks will be seen madly whirling around in the illuminated area in a most haphazard pattern while small fish periodically dash into the area from the outside shadows to pick off unlucky individuals.

Without doubt the cumaceans and their relatives the mysids form a significant part of the food for a great host of marine creatures. As part of the plankton community they are eaten by all filter feeders and they probably also contribute to the food of some whales particularly the grey which regularly feeds in shallow areas where these creatures abound.

'Our Town' Supports Gas Storage

By EARL CALDWELL

HERMISTON, Ore. (NYT)—Across the quiet valleys and hillsides, igloos stuffed with munitions stretch out in long, uneven rows and then disappear on the horizon. They sit among the clumps of sagebrush and the dull greasewood like giant eaarth-covered tombs.

There are a thousand and one of them scattered across the 20,000 acres of the Umatilla Army Depot. Some are filled with bombs and bullets. Others hold toxic chemicals and other material of war. Some are empty.

In a few weeks, many of them will be filled with poison gas weapons that the army plans to transfer from a base on Okinawa that will soon be abondoned.

CONTROVERSY

The movement of the chemical warfare material to the Umatilla Ordnance Depot, just a few miles west of Hermiston, has stirred controversy across the State of Oregon.

The governor has voiced his opposition. Both of Oregon's United States Senators oppose the move. And a group led by the District Attorney of Umatilla County says that the county will go to court to halt the shipment of gas.

But while the opposition around the state builds, the residents of Hermiston support, and even welcome, the army's decision. They have become more than impatient with the opposition.

"It's our town," Jan Murray snapped as she pumped gas at a little filling station just outside the downtown business district. "If we don't care, I don't know why everyone else is so bothered."

MORE WORK

On a main street sidewalk a 19-year-old youth remarked:

"It's none of the other people's business. If they bring in that gas, it will probably bring a lot more work here too. They should just keep out of it."

Up in the middle of Main Street, in McCabe's Restaurant, John Morgan called Hermiston "the best little town in America — and the most patriotic, too."

The opposition? "It's nothing," he said. "These people just want to be against everything, that's all."

The people of Hermiston have other arguments about the gas issue.

"They (the opposition) call it a moral issue," said Bill Loomis, a local radio announcer. "Well, if that's the case, why didn't they gripe when the gas was in Okinawa? We're no better than the Okinawans."

GAS SHORTAGE

The depot, which was opened in 1941, is commanded by Col. Charles R. Norris. He points out that certain types of nerve gas have been stored there since 1962. "And there have been no accidents, injuries or any cause for alarm because of its presence," he declares.

"There is a risk in anything that involves movement," Norris concedes. But he adds that "it is really negligible and I say that sincerely."

When discussing the support that the army has found in Hermiston, Norris says: "It's a rather refreshing bunch of patriots out here. This was the government's decision and they are willing to see it through."

$1,200 'BOUNTY' TO BE STERILIZED

EDINBURGH (AP) — Britain's population is growing so fast that it would be worthwhile offering a $1,200 bounty to a person agreeing to be sterilized, a Scottish professor says.

Dr. Aubrey Manning, a lecturer on zoology at Edinburgh University, writes in the periodical Fertility Control that the nation faces a crisis in human ecology. Ecology is the branch of biology which deals with living organisms and their relationship to the surroundings.

The fact that each day adds more than 1,000 people to the British Isles makes no impact at all, he says. First-class family planning is essential and a system of bounties such as introduced in India is needed in Britain too, he adds.

Only Tip of 'Golden Iceberg' Hit

By FRANK N. HAWKINS JR.

BOMBAY (AP) — Along a dark beach on the Arabian Sea, Indian customs officials emerged from a thicket and grabbed $835,000 in gold and watches, along with half a dozen men.

The raid against smugglers was one of several recently in which officials recovered well over $1,000,000—only the tip of a golden iceberg.

Customs men seized more than $6,700,000 in gold in 1968. One official estimates the amount is "three to five per cent of what's coming in and it's probably closer to three."

Even the five-per-cent figure means at least $134,000,000 in gold bullion was bootlegged into India in 1968.

To protect reserves of foreign exchange, the government has outlawed gold imports, but a seemingly insatiable demand has produced a booming gold trade.

Gold prices in India now are close to double the $40-an-ounce figure on the world market. High profits and small risks have made the country the world's chief target for gold smuggling.

MANY INVEST

Describing the demand, a government official said:

"Inherently, the Indian has confidence in gold and gold alone. He believes in investing in gold. That is his security against old age and bad luck."

A stroll through Bombay's palm-lined streets gives an indication of the demand. Women who sweep streets for the equivalent of a few cents a day can be seen wearing gold earrings or other trinkets. Gold shops glitter with merchandise and the city's bullion traders do a brisk business. At Hindu weddings it is customary for the bride's father to deck his daughter with as much gold as he can afford.

Officials say smuggling operations are centred in Dubay, a Persian Gulf port 1,200 miles away and 4½ days distant by dhow, the vessel that forms the backbone of gold-running into India's west coast.

The yellow metal, usually in the form of biscuit-size wafers marked with the names of European banks and trading houses, is paid for in dollars and other hard currencies bought on the black market, or in silver and cut diamonds.

Indian officials charged with stopping the smuggling claim their hands are tied by lack of funds and equipment and a dearth of interest from higher authorities.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two gunmen robbed Timothy Kalinowsky of $75 as he was walking in broad daylight to his car in a public parking lot behind the Hall of Justice—the city's police headquarters.

Wheat Stability Predicted

OTTAWA (CP) — World wheat production in 1970-71 is likely to be lower but stocks available for export will continue to be high, the federal agriculture department reported Wednesday.

In a statement bringing up to date data prepared for the agriculture outlook conference held here last November, the department says immediate future prospects are for somewhat higher world exports, stable prices, no reduction in stocks held by major exporters and "no sharp movement in the world situation."

"With the probability that world exports may be somewhat higher in 1969-70, and with relative stability in prices for two or three months, there is reason to expect that prices may not go lower than at present."

'Nationalism Won't Net Better World'

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP)—Younge people today tend to "debunk" national symbols they associate with war and exploitation, says sociologist Rev. A. A. MacDonald.

Interviewed at St. Francis Xavier University's extension department here, Dr. MacDonald said he feels there also is a certain questioning of nationalism in the traditional sense.

The recent PhD graduate of Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.—where he observed student revolt at close hand—is himself happy about Canada's new symbol of nationalism, the flag. "It's nice to see when you're away from home," he grinned.

But the attitude of many students to nationalism was: What will it do? Will it provide food for the hungry, education for the ignorant? Is pride of nationhood a great motivating factor for such things?

"The changes that have to come about in fundamental institutions in the neyt 10 years or so are great, but I think nationalism will have little or no part of it."

Most universities had merely transmitted knowledge from one generation to the next, rather than concerning themselves with changing society for the better. This explained the attitude of rebellious students who wanted to get at the root causes of poverty and conflict.

Preaching These Ideas 40 Years Ago

Dr. MacDonald said it is "amazing," however, to study and realize how some priests here were preaching 40 years ago ideas which now are considered new and sometimes almost revolutionary in the university context everywhere.

The late Dr. James Tompkins and Msgr. Moses Michael Coady—better known to thousands of all faiths as "Father Jimmy" and "Doc Coady" passionately advocated the idea of universities as engines of change.

The Coady International Institute, which attracts students and scholars from around the world, perpetuates their work along with the extension department, formed in 1928 at the urging of other crusading priests, notably Very Rev. Michael Gillis, now retired in Sydney, N.S.

Some years ago a Cornell survey placed at 6,000,000 the number of people in many climes who had benefitted from the work of the extension program—the Antigonish Movement. One newspaper estimated a few weeks ago the figure now is probably about 10,000,000 with the work of the Coady Institute since 1960.

The social gospels of Coady and Tompkins, cousins, involving self-help, economic co-operation and unloosing the potential of the silent masses, were not fully understood by their contemporaries and are still not fully accepted today, said Father MacDonald.

Universities, in his view, should be constantly critical of all structures, whether church, political, economic—or university.

CHICAGO (CP) — A strong demand generated by cold weather sent most commodity futures higher on the Board of Trade today. Trade was mixed and active.

The cold weather created a demand for animal feeds, which include corn, oats and meals.

Soybean meal futures bulled ahead nearly 200 points under strong demand from a mixed trade. There followed a small amount of profit taking but prices were strong at the close.

Charges Dismissed

TORONTO (CP) — Three charges against Revenue Properties Co. Ltd. of Toronto of filing false and misleading financial statements in their 1968 annual report were dismissed Wednesday by Provincial Judge S. Tugger Bigelow.

Judge Bigelow reserved judgment to Feb. 9 on a prosecution motion to have a fourth charge of omitting a statement of source and application of funds filed under a different section of the Ontario Securities Act.

In his six-page judgment Judge Bigelow said it was clear to him that reasonable doubt had been established in favor of the company.

The transaction which brought about the charges, laid by the Ontario Securities Commission, was the sale by Revenue of a parcel of land to Combo Construction Ltd. of Toronto.

Alcan Aluminium Makes Change In Ownership

MONTREAL (CP) — Alcan Aluminium Ltd. has announced a re-arrangement of its holdings in Alcan Aluminum Corp. and Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd.

The change involves the transfer of all the shares of Alcan Aluminum Corp., its U.S. fabricating subsidiary, to Aluminum Co. of Canada, its Canadian operating subsidiary.

Payment for the U.S. shares has been made to Alcan Aluminium Ltd. by the Aluminum Co. of Canada's issue of additional common shares of its capital. Transfer was effective Jan. 31, 1969.

The parent company said the change in ownership is designed to reflect the growing interdependence of Alcan's North American operations and to provide an improved financial base for the further development of these activities.

Cominco

Cominco Ltd. said Wednesday the Bluebell Mine on the east shore of Kootenay Lake at Riondel will probably close in 18 to 24 months unless more lead-zinc ore is found.

The mine has been operating for 17 years at the rate of 250,000 tons a year. The operation employs about 200 men. A drilling program is under way seeking new ore reserves.

Cominco said if the mine is shut down, it could reopen the HB mine near Salmo, which has been closed for two years.

Volvo

A 1969 production increase of 7.8 per cent, of 6,015 cars compared with 5,670 in 1968, is reported by Volvo (Canada, Ltd., which predicts a 1970 production total of 8,000 autos.

President Karl Kohler said he expects this to be one of the most competitive years in the industry.

A regional office for Western Canada is expected to be built soon, replacing an office located in Vancouver.

Jamaica Banks

Four Canadian chartered banks operating in Jamaica will have competition from three U.S. commercial banks early next year.

Jamaica Minister of Finance and Planning Edward Seaga said the Bank of America (largest in the U.S.), First National Bank of Chicago and Chase Manhattan Bank will bring to five the number of U.S. banks operating in the island.

The Canadian banks already there are Bank of Montreal, Royal Bank, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the Bank of Nova Scotia.

A new merchant bank also is planned by the Bank of Nova Scotia, the West India Company of Merchant Bankers Ltd., bringing to nine the number of new banking institutions set up or planned in the current banking year.

Ranger Oil

Ranger Oil (Canada) Ltd. said Wednesday it has acquired a number of producing oil and gas properties in British Columbia and Alberta from Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd.

The acquisition includes Amoco interests in the Joffre, Crossfield and Carrot Creek oilfields in Alberta and in the North Beg and Jedney gas fields in B.C.

Ranger estimated the acquisition will add about $150,000 a year to its cash flow.

Newberry

J. J. Newberry Co. expects to acquire Gault Bros. Ltd., of Vancouver, early this year. Agreement in principle has been reached to take over the manufacturer of hospital and laundry textiles, wholesaler and general store operator under the name Columbia.

The U.S. based department and specialty store chain owns United Stores of Canada, Sweet 16 and a number of other clothing, textile and shoe businesses, for a total of 751 units of all kinds in Canada and the U.S.

GOLD PRICE SKIDS

LONDON (Reuters) — The price of gold on the London free market today slumped to below its official monetary level of $35 an ounce for the first time.

As soon as the market opened this morning the group of dealers who fix the opening price of the bullion twice a day decided that this morning's rate should be $34.975.

This was a drop of 2.5 cents on Wednesday's rate of $35—only the second time ever that the precious metal has been exactly on par with the official rate.

The low rate in the market today appeared certain to revive speculation over implementation of last week's International Monetary Fund agreement about South African gold sales.

In effect, this activated the selling of South African gold to the fund when the free market rate fell to $35. This is the official rate at which central banks buy and sell gold.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Tight Money Causes Problems for All

(This is a service of The Times and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia).

By EDGAR DOWNEY, C.A.

Tight money is becoming tighter and will become tightest.

For borrowers it appears that conditions will still become worse before they can become better and no one is even guessing for how long.

In the fall of 1969 some bank managers were avoiding customer loan requests with the suggestion that January 1970 would be easier. Now it is January they are suggesting that customers should wait till spring and not "do it now."

Then, in the spring they may have to say "no" again and look forward to summer, and fall, and around to January again.

But do not blame the bank manager, he is just as unhappy as his customers. He cannot apply his ability in appraising loan applications but must suddenly learn how to say "no" to every one, and to try to say it without irritating the customer.

NO ANSWER

There is no answer for the small business borrower, and very few answers for large business either.

The public issue money market is also extremely tight, all money sources are tight because we have a continuing demand for financing which is greater than our rate of savings.

Even giant successful corporations have resorted to most unusual mixtures in the form of securities they issue to raise funds for expansion.

A few years ago financing "gimmicks" were used for new ventures in peculair risk positions. Now, the combination units of bonds, common shares, warrants and premiums are used by even the most staid corporations in their efforts to reach the funds which are still available.

WILL PASS

This makes it difficult for the investor and the borrower to measure the real value of a new issue of securities. Just as the "tea towel with the soap flakes" gimmick in the super market makes it difficult for the housewife to evaluate the soap flakes she needs and the tea towel she does not need, so the warrants with the bonds presents the same problem for the investor.

In time this current fashion in financing will pass as it has passed in other fields but it, too, will likely get worse before it gets better. Eventually, people will demand the return to ordinary financial arrangements so that a new issue can be measured in direct terms just like soap flakes.

In the meantime, the complexities will cause problems for borrowers and lenders and we must learn how to deal with them but there is no course available in six easy lessons.

Most businessmen will generally have to accept the lack of money for the time being and postpone their plans for expansion. Where a new project has already been started and the choice must be made between abandoning the expense already incurred or carrying the project through at uneconomic finance costs the result may be disastrous.

In any event, this is a time for extra caution until the financial position becomes more stable and future conditions more reasonably predictable.

Canadian GM In Big Gain

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's four major car manufacturers added up their 1969 sales Wednesday and found them, over-all, slightly better than in 1968.

But the latest estimate of total 1969 sales in foreign-made cars, although only a small part of the total market, will be sharply up, with foreign makers wresting another 1 per cent of the total domestic market from the Canadians.

All the sale increase, however, was registered by General Motors of Canada, which sold 367,255 vehicles, up 6.2 per cent from 1968's 345,710 and the company's second-best year on record.

American Motors' sales dropped marginally, to 19,859 from 19,917. Chrysler and Ford of Canada drops were sharper: Chrysler about 7 per cent, to 153,101 from 162,809; and Ford to 241,583 from 244,744—a 1.25-per-cent decline.

Motor vehicle sales in Canada in 1968 totalled 889,453 units—meaning about 14 per cent of the market went to imported cars, or those produced in Canada by foreign firms.

CANADIAN CARS DROP

The Motor Vehicle Manufacturers' Association's latest estimate of 1969 total sales is 915,000 units, which leaves 133,293 to be sold by other than the Big Four—a jump of 14 per cent in their sales. This will reduce the Canadian makers' share of the total market to 85 from 86 per cent.

Like their U.S. parents, the Canadian firms are meeting the situation by trying to beat the foreign firms at their own game by producing compact cars at competitive prices.

Ford set a new-car production record with its small Maverick, introduced last April.

Wednesday, American Motors (Canada) Ltd. said it will increase production of its compact Hornet, introduced last September, by 25 per cent this month, and stop making anything else in Canada.

The Canadian makers' production outpaced their sales, since a good proportion of their output goes to the U.S. under the Canada-U.S. Auto Trade agreement.

Total 1969 production in Canada was 1,348,558 vehicles, nearly 15 per cent up from the 1,176,569 in 1968.

But among the big four, all the production increase was registered by Ford and General Motors of Canada. Each set production records, and Ford outbuilt General Motors, with 566,788 cars and trucks, compared with 498,022 for GM.

Chrysler production dropped almost 10 per cent—to 216,621 units from 235,724, while American Motors was down 14 per cent, to 35,916 units from 41,726.

Gas Price Control Opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Western Canadian petroleum producers said Wednesday they are on the verge of a natural gas bonanza and they urged the National Energy Board not to tamper.

The Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, representing independent producers, and Shell Canada Ltd., biggest producer last year, both urged the board to avoid any attempt to control the wellhead price of gas.

The energy board is reviewing gas export policy before hearing five main export applications. It received notice Tuesday the Alberta government would oppose any attempt at federal control of wellhead prices as a violation of provincial jurisdiction over minerals.

The 10-year-old board partially controls the minimum export price of gas. In addition, the board late last year invoked powers under the National Energy Act enabling it to regulate rates charged utility companies by pipeline firms.

The hearing opened Nov. 25.

Calgary oil man Carl Nickle, president of IPAC, told the board the wellhead gas price is controlled by competition from other fuels. Government regulation would inhibit exploration and cause a gas shortage.

C. R. Mattinson, economist-geologist for Shell Canada, forecast an excellent marketing situation for gas in the next few years.

Government policy should be designed to encourage exploitation and sale of Canada's gas reserves as rapidly as possible in case other developments in the energy field should result in wasting gas resources, he said.

Two Mine Union Men Receive Threats

CLARKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Investigators say two close allies of the late Joseph (Jock) Yablonski have received threatening telephone calls since the murders of the United Mine Workers Union official, his wife and daughter.

State police said Wednesday the first report came from Marion Pellegrini, an official of UMW District 5 from nearby Canonsburg.

Later, Elmer Brown, a Delbarton, W. Va., coal miner who was Yablonski's vice-presidential running mate in the union's recent presidential election, said he had reported a threat to the FBI.

Pellegrini, who was questioned by four FBI agents, said his wife received a call from a man at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday. The caller simply said, "Warning, you're next," and hung up, he said.

"We don't know whether this is a crank call or not but we're keeping patrols in the area," said Capt. Joseph Snyder, in charge of the investigation.

Pellegrini said he was sure the caller meant the threat.

TAKES IT SERIOUSLY

"I take this seriously," he said. "No job is worth a person's life, especially if it is a threat to a person's family."

Brown said he received a telephone call a few days ago "telling me to mind my own business." He described it as "more or less a warning," saying he didn't take it too seriously. In his report to the FBI, Brown asked that top officials of the UMW be given lie detector tests to clear themselves of the slayings, which were discovered Monday.

The request, similar to one made Tuesday night in West Virginia by Dr. Hawey Wells, a crusader for coal mine safety, was the latest in a series of inferences that the slayings were connected to the hotly contested December election which Yablonski lost to incumbent W. A. (Tony) Boyle.

Snyder called the request "unrealistic."

"Our investigations would have to point to someone before such tests would be valid," he said.

The initial claim that the slayings and the election were linked was made by Yablonski's two lawyer sons, Kenneth and Joseph Yablonski, now under FBI guard.

In a radio interview in Washington earlier in the day, Boyle discounted the sons' claims.

"They are obviously emotionally upset," Boyle said. "I can well understand why they would be."

Representative Kenneth Heckler (Dem. W. Va.), an outspoken Yablonski supporter during the election, said he is convinced the events were connected.

"I am convinced the top leaders of the UMW did not direct the brutal murder, but the sordid record of the union, the venom they spread during the campaign and the possible fear of some lower union officials that Mr. Yablonski might report illegal activities all contribute to the pattern which led to this hideous deed," Heckler said.

A funeral mass for the Yablonskis will be offered Friday morning at Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic Church in Washington, Pa., about 20 miles from Clarksville.

Arms Changed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The City of Vancouver Wednesday received its new coat of arms from the British College of Heralds. It is basically the same design as the old one, with a logger and fisherman on either side of a shield. But the new coat of arms has the men in up-to-date clothing and clean-shaven.

FERRY MID-SECTION READY FOR LAUNCHING

The new 84-foot midsection for the B.C. ferry Queen of Victoria is due to be launched at Burrard Dry Dock Jan. 23.

The section is slightly larger than the one built for the first stretched ferry, the Queen of Esquimalt, and includes part of the sun deck level, one deck higher than the Queen of Esquimalt's.

The Queen of Victoria has been drydocked at Vancouver for the removal of rudders and the fitting of shell doublers.

Work on joining the new section to the Queen of Victoria will begin in late January. Completion is slated for April 13.

U Thant Backs Nigerian Side

MONROVIA, Liberia (Reuters) — United Nations Secretary-General U Thant said Wednesday the UN will not tolerate secession in Nigeria or anywhere else.

He said the UN charter pledges the world body to respect the territorial integrity of member nations.

In Ottawa, acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said that the cabinet had reached a "tentative decision in principle" on the Nigeria-Biafra relief situation. He told reporters that he would make an announcement this week, probably Friday, on the decision.

Thant also told the Liberian legislature the most peaceful way of ending the Nigerian civil war is along lines laid down by the Organization of African Unity in September calling for a cease-fire followed by negotiations.

Thant said the federal government's attitude to the humanitarian aspect of its war with the breakaway state of Biafra is sensible.

Labor Council Fully Supports Cement Strike

Full support of Victoria Labor Council was given Wednesday to the 25-day-old strike of cement workers at B.C.'s two raw cement plants.

The Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers Union strike position was outlined to the council by Bruno Schachel, president of the union's Bamberton local at Ocean Cement Ltd., who was accompanied by five members.

He said the union wanted to make clear that far more is at stake than the few cents on hourly base rate rejected by the union when bargaining with Ocean Cement and Lafarge Cement Ltd. broke down.

Health and welfare benefits, holidays, and to a large degree working conditions, also are involved, he said.

"We could have made a settlement that would be nothing to brag about, and we would have liked to settle without a strike," Schachel said.

'COMPELLING'

"In my opinion we would not have struck if conditions had not deteriorated severely recently . . . The need was a compelling one," to bring cement workers to their first strike in 57 years. Schachel said.

Another reason was the company's rejection of a 1963 agreed clause of intention to institute a training program that would enable men to apply for better positions.

Schachel said this would provide the younger men particularly opportunity not only to increase their earning power but give them job content from which they could gain satisfaction.

The base rate in the cement plant was $2.95 before the strike, which Schachel thought many tradesmen would consider low.

But the strike is more involved than that, he said.

"It is my opinion they (Ocean Cement) wanted to prove to themselves, to us, to everyone, who is boss."

LOSING SALES

Meanwhile, the company is losing some sales through imported cement, made by a union plant of Columbia Cement at Bellingham, Schachel said. This is not considered "hot" because it comes from a non-striking plant with an agreement in force, and Schachel said he knew of no "hot" cement being brought in.

Alberta Safeways Cut Prices

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada Safeway Ltd.'s 36 stores in Edmonton will be closed three days next week to reduce prices of a number of food items to meet increasing competition.

R. W. Curell, the firm's vice-president in charge of northern Alberta, said the stores will be closed Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday while prices are "readjusted."

He said "quite a number of them (prices) will be adjusted downward" and added the move was because of "competitive factors."

Mr. Curell said food prices to Safeway have not decreased and lower prices will result from reduced markups.

A spokesman for Alberta Wholesale Grocers Ltd., said there has been pressure on prices since discount stores entered the picture.

There is no indication that similar reductions are planned for B.C. stores.

'GREAT IMPOSTOR' NOW A PASTOR

He should know.

Demara, the "Great Imposter," has at various times been a Trappist monk, a doctor of philosophy, an eminent zoologist, surgeon and assistant prison warden.

Once, as Dr. Joseph Cyr, he performed an appendectomy aboard a Canadian corvette off Korea in a raging storm. That career ended when the real Dr. Cyr, practicing in Edmundson, New Brunswick, raised questions about his namesake in the Canadian Navy.

He was the subject of a best-selling book and a 1961 movie starring Tony Curtis.

Now, as Fred W. Demara, D.D., he has turned up as pastor of the San Juan Baptist Church here on this island 15 miles east of Victoria.

As in the past, his performance has been impressive.

Demara once was on the faculty of St. Martin's College near Olympia Wash., as Dr. Robery Linton French, a professor of psychology.

A college spokesman said at that time: "The students were enthralled. The man has a wonderful personality. All the students were going to be psychologists."

Demara's explanation of how he could teach psychology was simplicity itself.

"I just kept ahead of the class," he says. "The best way to learn anything is to teach it."

Gale Walrod, on the the church leaders who helped select Demara to fill the vacant pulpit of the 30-member church, says the new minister is "real dedicated" and has plunged into the difficult task of trying to build up the church.

Demara, who once said "being an imposter is a tough habit to break," won't comment about his new position.

Meanwhile, Demara preaches the word on Sundays and leads prayer services on Wednesday evenings.

Hydro Heads Defend Rates Boost

Two provincial cabinet ministers, both directors of B.C. Hydro, have defended the announced 15-per-cent increase in electricity rates.

Resources Minister Ray Williston and Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan said the increases are justified.

Williston denied Opposition Leader Dave Barrett's charge that the deficit of $250 million on the Columbia River Treaty is the cause of the increases announced last week by Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum.

"There is no Columbia factor in there yet," said Williston, "for the simple reason that we are still operating (on the Columbia development) on monies we were paid."

Asked if part of the reason for hydro's increase is the need to raise money to complete the Peace River power project, Williston said:

"I am not saying that is the case — but you can't raise money unless you show you can raise revenues to cover operations. No one is going to loan you money if you only show a deficit."

Kiernan was asked if the 15 per cent increase in rates would provide, as some critics have suggested, twice as much money as Hydro needs to cover recent salary increases to employees.

"I don't see that anything less than that would be realistic," he said.

"We have for a number of years been absorbing the cumulative effect of annual salary and wage increases and increasing interest rates, with the result that we are not simply dealing with the effect of one year's increase in salaries, wages and costs."

Curling Playdowns In Duncan

DUNCAN — Three years' effort by Duncan Curling Club will be rewarded with the hosting of the Pacific Coast and British Columbia championships to be held here Feb. 6 to 11.

Glen Harper, in charge of the B.C. playdowns, said Wednesday most of the club's 400 members are involved in one aspect or another in the host role.

Between 300 and 400 spectators are expected for every game. It will be the first time in more than 10 years that the championship has been staged on Vancouver Island.

Duncan's entry hopes meanwhile, are at stake starting today. Twenty rinks are competing in the 18th annual men's bonspiel.

In the Pacific Coast event here next month, four Island winners will be in competition against two Vancouver and two Fraser Valley rinks. The winner will then go to a two-out-of-three B.C. championship battle against the interior representative.

The B.C championship rink then goes on to Winnipeg to vie for the Dominion title.

The 18th annual has attracted 40 rinks from Vancouver Island and Mainland points and the roster was filled more than two months ago.

Speedy Circles Draw $75 Fine

A 22-year-old city man was fined $75 in court Wednesday for dangerous driving.

Robert H. Clarke, 440 Simcoe, was stopped by police Nov. 14 in a 700-block Pandora parking lot after he had driven his car in circles at high speed on the lot.

GREEN LANDSCAPES, NAPALM BURNS

Eye-Witness Tells Vietnam Story

Idyllic green landscapes contrasted with ugly pictures of napalm burns and artillery wounds inflicted on young children, and trees turned brown by defoliants.

The scenes showed Vietnam as viewed through the eyes of Dr. Alje Vennema when he worked in the country from 1964 to 1968.

Dr. Vennema, a Dutch-born Canadian, spoke at the First United Church in Victoria Wednesday night as part of a two-week tour across Canada sponsored by the Voice of Women and the Quakers.

In an address illustrated by color slides, Dr. Vennema revealed how in the time that he served in Vietnam as a doctor in the province of Quang Ngai, the country changed from a relatively peaceful environment into a savage and brutal battleground.

He left the country after the Tet offensive of the early part of 1968 and made a report to officials of the federal government for which he received the Canada Service Medal.

Dr. Vennema told the group that he had showed about 15 members of the external affairs department some of the pictures he had taken of conditions in Vietnam and the reaction was that the situation was "tragic."

He added, however, that he had not heard any outspokenness on the part of those who viewed the slides.

Earlier Wednesday in Vancouver he said he spoke with Paul Martin, then external affairs minister, about three years ago and that Martin's reaction was that the war was "tragic." He also said that Martin discussed the war with American president Lyndon Johnson, but that he "got nowhere."

Dr. Vennema filed a report on his knowledge of the war with the government in 1968.

Dr. Vennema's story was a gruesome one about a war in which, he said, "civilian casualities were uncountable."

He stated that after shelling a village the Viet Cong had briefly occupied but then evacuated, a South Vietnamese commander claimed a great victory and counted the civilians killed as slain enemies.

The Canadian-sponsored hospital that Dr. Vennema directed was near the secne of the alleged massacre of Vietnamese civilians by American troops that made headlines recently. He has said that he knew of the massacre of at least 110 persons, but did not report it because such slaughters were commonplace.

Dr. Vennema showed the audience of about 80 persons pictures that revealed great contrasts between the rich and poor in South Vietnam. The slides included many of persons suffering from burns, the loss of limbs and similar injuries, and tear gas poisoning.

He charged that a part of the old Vietnamese capital of Hue was destoyed by an American bombardment during the Tet offensive four hours after the last Viet Cong had left the section, and that South Vietnamese troops looted the city following the battle.

Father Testifies That He Fought For His Life

A father testified in Assize Court Wednesday that he fought for his life in a long desperate battle with his son-in-law.

Edward Ronald Hall, 55, of Ladysmith said the fight began when he found John Noel Carifelle mistreating his daughter in her apartment at 320 First Avenue, Ladysmith.

The daughter, Mrs. Anita Louise Carefelle, a 23-year-old hairdresser, is on trial for slaying her husband with a kitchen knife around midnight on Oct. 3.

The father said he and his wife went to their daughter's apartment and found her sitting on the chesterfield with Carifelle. She had bruises and scratches on her neck, arms and face and her hair was disarrayed. She looked wild and distressed.

Hall testified that he had said to Carifelle: "What the hell has been going on?"

AT IT AGAIN

"Our hero's been at it again," Mrs. Carifelle was said to have replied.

The father said "You dirty rotten son of a bitch, get out of here."

"I didn't do anything," Carifelle was quoted as saying.

"You liar," Mrs. Carifelle said.

Hall said Carifelle then struck him with his fist and he fell to the ground.

"I tried to get up," Hall said, "and he kicked me in the mouth. I lashed out with my feet and he landed on the floor beside me.

'WILD, EXCITED'

"He was wild and excited and he was trying to grip me round the throat, but I more or less fought him off. We struggled into the hallway. When I got to my feet, Carifelle charged at me again."

At one point in the struggle, Hall said, Carifelle got him by the throat and tried to beat his head against the edge of a cement block.

"I was in a fight for my life. I tried to take his fingers from my throat and couldn't. I stuck my finger in his left eye . . . and his hands relaxed."

Crown prosecutor J. W. Anderson asked Hall if he heard someone shout: "Kill him, kill him!"

"No," Hall replied.

"Hadn't you tried to keep him away from his own child?"

"Only when he was drunk," Hall said.

SELF-DEFENCE

Defence counsel D. M. Cunliffe said it was evident Mrs. Carifelle stabbed her husband because she thought he was killing her father. It was also an act of self-defence.

"She was justified in using whatever force she did use," counsel said.

Crown counsel Anderson referred to an earlier fight between Hall and his son-in-law in April 1968.

"Did you swear at him?" counsel asked.

"Very slightly," Hall replied.

"I suggest you didn't have any particular fear of the deceased," Anderson said.

"I'm not afraid of anyone," Hall replied.

He said he became involved in a fight with Carifelle after he found his daughter lying face-down, apparently unconscious on a cot in her beauty parlor.

Hall said the fight ended when he hit Carifelle over the head with a carpenter's level.

12 Months Probation

A 31-year-old serviceman serving an 18-month probation for a forgery conviction last November received a suspended sentence and was placed on a 12-month probation Wednesday in court for a further forgery conviction.

Ronald E. Gienow, 31, 3233 Shelly, pleaded guilty to forging a payroll cheque that did not belong to him Aug. 24 and opening a bank account with the forged cheque.

Gienow had been convicted of a similar offence in November concerning a cheque he forged and cashed at a service station where he was employed.

Gienow's counsel pointed out that the accused had complied with all stipulations of the November sentence and that because the second forgery charge was related to the circumstances of the first offence a second suspended sentence should be given.

Male Nursing Course

The Victoria Vocational School is offering a new 10-month course for male nursing orderlies due to start Feb. 2.

The role of orderlies in B.C. hospitals is a growing one, says a vocational school press release. Students will be trained to provide complete bedside nursing and to perform certain technical procedures, with emphasis on male patients.

Applicants should be at least 18 years old, have minimum grade 10 education and possess a sincere desire to nurse.

Cost of the course is $15 a month. Information and application forms can be obtained from the school, 1250 Quadra.

B.C. Liberals to Review Party Policies

A two-year review of provincial Liberal Party policies gets under way next week at the party's annual convention in Vancouver.

An estimated 500 persons or more are expected to attend the convention which runs from Thursday to Saturday at the Hotel Vancouver.

The review of the provincial party platform will be kicked off at Saturday morning wokshop discussions on topics such as "Youth and Unrest", "Pollution and our Environment" and "Our Developing Frontier".

But the highlight of the convention is expected to be a Friday evening discussion on the role of British Columbia in Confederation.

This discussion will help form a basis for B.C. participation in a Western Regional Liberal Conference to be held in Edmonton in May, which is expected to deal with the role of the western provinces in Confederation.

Decision to hold the western regional meeting was announced at the end of the Harrison national Liberal policy conference in November. That meeting heard a few complaints from western delegates about policy discussions being over-related to eastern Canadian problems and particularly those of the Toronto urban area.

The B..C convention will also discuss Finance Minister Edgar Benson's tax proposals.

Also scheduled for discussion are topics that formed the basis for the Harrison thinkers' meeting including poverty, the cities, communications and industrial relations.

Provincial Liberal Leader Pat McGeer, who will address the convention Saturday morning, says in pre-convention message that the meeting will "set priorities for our provincial party for the coming legislative session."

A provincial thinkers' conference is also being organized to "complement the Harrison conference", McGreer said.

"This conference will examine all fields of provincial government endeavor with the objective of setting provincial goals for the next generation.

"It will lead to another crucial provincial convention on policy," he said.

The question of McGreer's leadership of the provincial party is not expected to come up at the meeting.

T-Birds Clipped In Final Seconds

PORTLAND (AP) — Portland State Vikings, behind 48-33 at halftime, stormed back to edge University of British Columbia Thunderbirds 78-76 Tuesday night in an Intercollegiate basketball meeting.

PSU didn't gain the lead until the final 11 seconds when Glen McClendon sank one of two free throws, giving Vikings a 77-76 edge.

UBC lost the ball on a bad pass moments later and Charlie Stoudamire added Vikings' final point on a free thrown after the game had ended.

It was Portland State's second straight win over UBC. Vikings won Monday night's encounter 111-88.

HIRED by Montreal Expos as director of field relations is Billy Hitchcock, 53, former manager of major league baseball clubs at Baltimore and Atlanta.

CATS WERE BUSY BUZZERS

Buzzing around the Westminster goal are Victoria linemates Chris Riddell (17), Lonnie Miles (7) and Don Blyth (20). Cougars were busy buzzers all night and this sort of action had Royal defenders in constant trouble Wednesday as Cats skated to 6-2 triumph to regain first place in B.C. Junior Hockey League. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

Cougars Alone In First Place

Shibicky, Webster Provide Spark In 6-2 Victory

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougars are keeping a sharp focus on first place in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League and Alex Shibicky is threatening to take some of the fuzziness out of the team's individual scoring picture.

The slightly-built Shibicky carried more than his weight for a third straight game Wednesday as Cougars rang up an easy 6-2 victory over New Westminster's ragged Royals to move into sole possession of first place.

Shibicky scored twice and set up another goal to run his total to eight points in his three outings since joining the Cougars.

Although Ted Plowe, and then Bruce Cowick, set the league scoring paces earlier in the season, the Cougars have faded from the individual point scene in recent weeks.

VERNON PLAYERS LEAD

Now Vernon players are riding high with Wayne Dye (52 points), Larry Quechuck (44) and Don Manson (42) running 1-2-3.

Cougars' best is Bruce Cowick, with 40 points, Plowe, who has missed the past four games, is next with 35.

Shibicky, on the strength of his three-game performance, may be ready to supply that offensive leadership Evans displayed before graduating from junior ranks.

His first goal came after Cougars had Wednesday's game well in hand, but it was as pretty as they come. It also proved, again, that the son of a one-time National Leaguer knows what to do in front of the net.

BOND GETS 10TH

Shayne Webster also scored two goals and an assist to provide early ignition. Cowick scored his 16th of the season and Gerry Bond counted his 10th to take firm control as the league's highest-scoring defenceman.

A pair of juvenile recruits—Randy Miller and Grant Williams — scored for Royals, who went down to their 31st defeat in 33 games. Deservedly so. Royals showed up without coach Dick Spring and only 12 players.

Despite their shortcomings, the Royals gave Cougars a run for the points for two periods in a quiet game. The action, for most of the part, centered around Dave McLelland in the New Westminster net.

He was outstanding in stopping 48 shots.

POOR FINISH

Cougar forwards made McLelland's chore easier with their poor finish. Although dominating play most of the way, Cougars fluffed a chance to pile up more goals with their poor positioning on attack.

Shibicky and Webster were the exceptions.

Webster scored three goals on his first three shots. One of the goals was disallowed, however, when referee Bunker Hill detected Webster in the New Westminster crease.

Webster's fourth shot on the target also led to a goal. While the original shot was blocked, Webster picked up his own rebound and slipped a pass to Bond, who made no mistake.

Webster's accuracy in shooting is emphasized because Cougars' average with on-target shots has never been too great. But his positional play is better than other wingers who feel they can score from behind the net, which is where they stand for some unexplicable reason.

Defensively, Cougars played a sound game and goaltender Ed Forslund was unfortunate in not recording his first shutout of the season.

Besides figuring in three goals, Bond was the bright light of a Cougar defence that, most of the way, was in complete command. Few of the 1,056 fans could detect that Laurie Moore played with a bad back. Murray Kennett, Randy Bock and Dale Pennock; — Victoria's other rearguards — also played strongly.

IMPROVEMENT NOTED

Kennett's play was especially heartening for coach Doug Anderson. He played with a confidence that hasn't always been obvious this season. As a result, he turned in one of his best games.

Plowe is scheduled to return to the lineup at the weekend when Cougars move to the Okanagan for a three-game swing. He was available Wednesday but Anderson wanted Plowe to get in at least one more practice (tonight) before returning to action after a layoff of almost three weeks.

Bill WALKER

Then there are the suggestions that Canada has sold its hockey soul to the devil; that the Nationals couldn't have beaten Russia anyway; that a compromise could have been reached with a little more effort; that Canada can't get into the 1972 Olympics without going through International channels.

All this, and more, keeps the pot simmering following Canada's pull-out from International hockey at the weekend.

All deserve to be heard.

The Devil in this case is the National Hockey League, because as one Winnipeg writer said:

"Professional hockey has a stranglehold on the game in this country, and it will continue that way." Maurice Smith of the Free Press says that Hockey Canada president Charlie Hay "was led down the garden path" by the pros, but could do nothing about it.

He described him as a "nice but incredibly naive old chap" and that Hockey Canada, "a monumental bust from the start, is happy to be rid of International hockey."

And the inference is there for all to see. The NHL called the tune for Canada's withdrawal.

Because Canada, by whatever direction, did urge the IIHF to take a strong stand on the use of pros, adopt its own eligibility rules, and face up to the International Olympic Committee later.

Naturally, the Winnipeg authors have a right to be critical for the world tournament was scheduled for Winnipeg, which also was the home base of the Nationals.

Still, the point should be well taken. Because it is obvious the NHL teams did not go all out to guarantee the Nationals the use of their top minor league professionals.

This was evident in the continued use of such players by the NHL clubs on an emergency basis. And that alone made those players ineligible for international competition even under the original IIHF ruling which allowed the use of nine professionals.

Thus it can be argued that the calibre of the pros that Canada would have received, might not have been much help, because all the best ones had been used up, by the NHL. So what was left? Nothing. So why go with it?

Naturally, officials of the National team were pleased with the team's performance during the recent Russian tour of Canada. The Nationals won three and lost two. And it did appear that perhaps Canada would have a chance to end the Russian reign, playing at home for the first time, and all that.

Team manager Buck Houle thought so, even though he had to be prejudiced because of his position. But he did say he needed more help, and admitted that he didn't know who would be made available.

This made his position rather tenuous at best, particularly as Smith suggests: "Hockey Canada had promised to develop an outstanding National team for the championship but later realized it would be difficult to deliver on the promise."

The compromise suggestion is sound and two fold.

Earl Dawson, the CAHA representative at the IIHF meeting proposed that the tournament become invitational rather than international, and that would "bypass" all the Olympic eligibility complaints.

Others said the Canadian delegation should have gone along with the IIHF ruling and held the tournament regardless, because what difference was 70 days going to make in a situation that had been suffered for years.

"The Europeans have been giving us the shaft for years, but since we've been dancing to Bunny Ahearne's tune for 20 years anyway, this is a damn poor time to suddenly sit this one out. How much damage to our cherished integrity and self respect was 70 more days going to do." These were some of Matheson's cryptic comments.

"And Canada probably would have lost to the Russians, with or without the pros," Smith added on the same theme.

And now it is said that Canada can't wait until 1972, as proposed, to ice its strictly amateur team in the Olympics. It has to name a team for world competition and qualify all over again in 1971. So here we go again.

For none of this in regard to the proclivity for blunder in international hockey is new.

It's a continuing story. When the Penticton Vs won the world title in 1955 the opinion was expressed then that European teams should declare their own champion and then meet the best in North America. That never came about. Canada won again in 1961 with Trail. Since then the fuss has gone on with Canada never able to ice its best players because they were professional.

Then when beaten, the cry was "get out."

Now that we are out, it's why didn't we stay in — for another two months or so?

At any rate, there you have it, the other view for your perusal, or should we all "take gas" as Matheson suggested Manitoba was doing.

What do you, the reader, think of it all. Your comments will be welcome.

Tony Stretches String As Hawks Turn Tables

By Canadian Press

Chicago Black Hawks turned the tables on Detroit Red Wings Wednesday night with rookie goaltender Tony Esposito collecting his eighth shutout of the National Hockey League season and a measure of revenge over Roy Edwards.

Edwards was in the Red Wings goal Sunday when they downed the Hawks 4-0 in Detroit with Esposito the losing goalie. Wednesday, the 26-year-old sensation from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., held the Wings scoreless while the Black Hawks poured seven goals into Edwards' nets.

Esposito's big brother, Phil, meanwhile scored two goals and assisted on another for Boston Bruins' 6-1 victory over Oakland Seals. In other games, New York Rangers downed Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3, Toronto Maple Leafs tied Minnesota North Stars 3-3 and Philadelphia Flyers gained a 2-2 deadlock with St. Louis Blues.

The younger Esposito leads the league in shutouts and now is only five short of matching the modern record of 13 set by Toronto Maple Leafs goalie Harry Lumley in the 1953-54 season.

He stopped 25 Detroit shots Wednesday before a Chicago crowd of 16,666 while the Black Hawks pelted Edwards with 39 drives.

COLLECT TWO EACH

Dennis Hull and Stan Mikita each scored twice with single goals coming from Eric Nesterenko, Bobby Hull and Cliff Koroll for Chicago's first win in four games.

The Black Hawks now are six points back of fourth-place Detroit in the East Division.

Centre Walt Tkaczuk scored twice and earned an assist to lead the New York attack before a crowd of 4,671 at Pittsburgh. The win kept the Rangers four points ahead of second-place Boston in the East.

Juha Widing, Dave Balon and Jean Ratelle were the other New York marksmen with Ken Schinkel replying twice for the Penguins and rookie Nick Harbaruk getting the other goal.

It was the Penguins 19th loss in 36 games and dropped them into fourth spot in the West Division, one point behind Philadelphia.

BURNED IN RESCUE

The Rangers were without veteran defenceman Jim Neilson who suffered burns to his hands Tuesday morning while rescuing his five-year-old daughter from a fire at his home. The girl was not injured and the club said Neilson would be sidelined three or four days.

Left winger Johnny Bucyk also provided two goals, the second his 300th career goal, in Boston's victory over the Seals before 7,000 Oakland fans.

Bill Hicke scored the single goal for the Seals who remain in fifth spot in the West Division after their 23rd loss in 37 starts.

Montreal Canadiens said Wednesday they expect to have centre Jean Bellveau back in action for tonight's game with Pittsburgh at the Forum. Beliveau has been sidelined since Dec. 6 with an ankle injury.

Blues Dominate West All-Stars

MONTREAL (CP)—Seven of 12 players picked to represent the National Hockey League's West Division in its Jan. 20 all-star game against East Division opposition are from the host city's St. Louis Blues.

The NHL today announced 12 of the 19 players who will represent the West. The dozen were selected in a poll among members of the NHL Writers' Association in the six West Division cities.

The remaining seven players will be named by Blues coach Scotty Bowman, who will announce the additional selections next week.

Following are the 12 players selected in the writers' poll. Points were awarded on the basis of five points for a first-place choice, three for a second and one for a third (point totals are in brackets):

Right wing—Bill Goldsworthy, Minnesota (73); Frank St. Marseille, St. Louis (43).

This will be the second year in which the all-stars from the West play their East Division counterparts. Last year, the two teams played to a 3-3 tie here.

WIN DOUBLES POT

Members of the winning team will receive $500 each and those on the losing side will get $250 each from the league.

The poll decides participants in the all-star game only and the results do not count toward the selection of the official 1969-70 all-star teams. These will be chosen in a poll among members of the NHLWA at the end of the regular schedule.

Despite the abundance of St. Louis players, five of the six West Division teams are represented by the 12 players. Only the last-place Los Angeles Kings failed to have a player named.

The player closest to gaining a unanimous vote of 90 points was left winger McDonald with his 82 points. Voting was closest at defence where only 13 points separated Barclay Plager, Woytowich and Vadnais. In all six positions, however, the first two players had comfortable margins over the third-place members.

Dawson Carries Heavy Burden

By MIKE RATHET

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—What's it like to be in Lenny Dawson's shoes at this very moment, preparing for the Super Bowl Game while trying to forget having your name associated with a nationwide gambling investigation?

Only Lenny Dawson knows for sure and, as is his nature, he is keeping it within.

But Tom Flores, Dawson's team-mate with Kansas City Chiefs and himself a veteran quarterback, is qualified to step into Dawson's shoes and take a guess.

"I'm sure all this week the thing will be on his mind," said Flores, "because no one will let him forget about it—the press, the fans.

"If I was innocent I'd be a little disturbed because of the implications. It would upset me a little. But I wouldn't worry about it because I'd feel clean. If I was guilty it would probably upset me more. But I'm sure Lenny isn't guilty.

ATHLETES VULNERABLE

"The thing that disturbs me is how open athletes are to this type of thing because we are so much in the public eye. If you even get your name mentioned in the same paragraph with a gambler or relative to gambling, there are a lot of people who will be biased against you from then on."

Dawson will have to carry that realization throughout the remainder of the week as he prepares for the Super Bowl Sunday that sends his American Football League championship club against the National Football League champion Minnesota Vikings—because his name has been mentioned.

It was mentioned by the National Broadcasting Company as one of four quarterbacks among players who may be questioned in a broad federal probe of gambling now taking place in Detroit. The other quarterbacks named were Joe Namath of New York Jets, Bill Munson of Detroit Lions and Karl Sweetan of Los Angeles Rams.

Pete Rozelle, commissioner of professional football, said in a statement that he had been advised by the justice department that no decision had been reached on summoning any professional athletes and he planned no disciplinary action.

Dawson himself added to developments by acknowledging a casual relationship to a Birmingham, Mich., restaurateur arrested recently in connection with the investigation.

Undoubtedly that has added to the weight on Dawson's shoulders, but Flores feels he can handle it.

ADMITS WORRY

Dawson admitted that his concentration had been affected by reports naming him among six football personalities to be questioned.

"I haven't slept too well the last month," he said. "The season's been that way."

In Detroit, U.S. Attorney James Brickley said he doubts there will be many more arrests — "maybe one or two" — before a grand jury is asked for indictments. A grand jury convenes Jan. 20.

So far, 14 persons from four states — Michigan, Nevada, New York and Mississippi — have been arrested on charges of violating federal wagering laws. More than $600,000 has been seized in cash and cheques.

Asked whether pro football had been scarred by the developments, Rozelle said: "Well, it isn't healthy."

Hopes Retained

RIVERS, Man. (CP) — Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, has not given up hope that the 1970 world hockey tournament will be played in Canada.

Dawson countered a statement Tuesday by the Swedish Ice Hockey Federation that the Swedes would work toward a change of Olympic rules and open world hockey championships with his invitation to the Swedes to initiate action to return the tournament to Canada.

In a telegram Wednesday to Helge Bergland, Swedish federation president, Dawson said the CAHA "believes you are sincere in your remarks" as quoted in press reports from Stockholm.

"We strongly recommend that you take the initiative to convene a meeting of the five European Group A federations and urge them to return the 1970 championships to Canada on the basis of the Crans decision."

TOURNEY TRANSFERRED

It was at an International Ice Hockey Federation meeting at Crans, Switzerland, that approval was given for Canada to use nine professionals for the 1970 tournament.

When that decision was reversed Sunday in Geneva, Canada withdrew from the 1970 championships, and the tournament, which was to have been played in Montreal and Winnipeg, was transferred to Stockholm.

Formal Bid By Montreal

CHICAGO (AP) — Montreal formally entered a bid Wednesday in competition with three other cities, Los Angeles, Moscow and Florence, Italy, to stage the 1976 Summer Olympic Games.

O'Doul's Friends Plead For Change

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A citizens group has petitioned the city government to change the name of Candlestick Park to O'Doul Stadium in honor of the late baseball star Lefty O'Doul.

The 10-year-old park, now being refurbished, is the home of baseball's San Francisco Giants of the National League.

O'Doul, former National League batting champion and a San Francisco native son, died last month.

TOM, IT IS A GOOD THING TO HAVE YOUR KNEES BENT IN ALL GOLF SHOTS, BUT THE DEGREE OF BEND SHOULD BE DETERMINED BY THE CLUB YOU ARE USING!
YOU ARE SQUATTING FAR TOO MUCH WITH YOUR WEDGE. THIS LIFTS THE TOE OF THE CLUB OFF THE GROUND, AND IT WILL CROSS OVER AT IMPACT!
THE ENTIRE SOLE OF THE CLUB MUST REST ON THE GROUND. THEREFORE, I MUST STAND CLOSE TO THE BALL WITH A WEDGE AND ONLY BEND MY KNEES SLIGHTLY
BUT HERE, WITH THE LONGER 4-IRON, MY KNEES ARE MORE BENT AND I AM FURTHER FROM THE BALL. THE LONGER THE CLUB, THE MORE I BEND MY KNEES!

Response by Viewers May Decide Future Of Sports Demo Group

By STEWART LANG

If the Cross-Canada Sports Demonstration presented to approximately 750 Greater Victoria high school students Wednesday afternoon, is in the nature of an experiment—it must be judged a success on the enthusiastic reaction of the spectators.

The group of six international-calibre Canadian athletes, who are in Victoria on the western leg of a nation-wide tour, also performed before about 700 students in the morning.

Both presentations were at Lansdowne Junior High School. Another two shows were slated for today at Mount View before the group leaves for Nanaimo.

The main aim of this pilot project, financed and sponsored by the Fitness and Amateur Sport Directorate of the federal government, is to encourage interest in athletics by non-participating students and teachers.

Another aim of the company is to point out ways to improve the fitness level of Canadians.

Other members of the squad are Bill Heikkila, a javelin expert; Gerry Moro of Trail, pole-vaulting star; Michael Mason, who specializes in the long and triple jump; Marilynn Minacker, Canadian gymnastic champion on the balancing beam, and Diane Shelley, another top gymnast.

Only Mason and Miss Shelley have not competed in Olympic competition. Mason attends Simon Fraser University where he plans to major in writing and Miss Shelley is taking a year off before entering university to take part in the 10-month tour of Canada.

Bert Allen, who with Jerome is responsible largely for the striking "audio-visual" presentation of the group, accompanies the team as general manager and announcer.

The group started touring Canada in Toronto, Oct. 15, and have been working their way west through 20 cities and towns as well as about 75 demonstrations. There are 50 more cities to go.

Allen said that the future of the project depends on the response of their audiences in letters to the sport directorate.

If replies are favorable, the project may be expanded to embrace other types of sport.

The project is being conducted through the winter season in order to show local coaches and teachers what can be done the year around as far as training is concerned.

"It all hinges on the imaginative use of their gyms," said Allen.

Allen, who has yet to see a poor sports facility on the tour, said that "facilities are not the problem but more of an excuse" for the general lack of fitness.

What does Canada need most?

"I keep harping bank on leadership and direction," replied Allen.

He pointed out that this lack of leadership and purpose is further enhanced by the unimaginative use of available training space.

The reaction of a majority of students attending the demonstration showed that one basic aim had hit the mark—promoting an interest in fitness through athletics.

Stan Gill, coach of the B.C. high school champion track and field team from Mount Douglas, and Lois Appleby, head of the physical education department at Lansdowne, both said that every one of the students they talked to after the demonstration was enthusiastic and impressed.

"I think it was great for stimulating interest," said Gill. "It succeeded in reaching its objective."

Mrs. Appleby said:

KING CLANCY

CLANCY ONE OF MAIN SPEAKERS . . . . . . FOR SPORTS CELEBRITY DINNER

Colorful King Should Make It Lively

Victoria's third annual Sports Celebrity Dinner appears destined to be a lively and laugh-provoking affair.

This was all but assured Wednesday with confirmation that "King" Clancy would be one of the principal speakers at the Empress Hotel event that honors the city's outstanding sports personalities.

Always colorful, sometimes controversial, usually bubbling with humor, Francis Michael Clancy has been stirring up hockey headlines ever since he broke into professional ranks in the 1921-22 National Hockey League season.

Clancy, now an executive with Toronto Maple Leafs, will accompany the team on a west coast swing and fly to Victoria after a game against Oakland on March 3. After the dinner he will rejoin the Leafs in Los Angeles.

He was 18 years old when he stepped into NHL ranks with the Ottawa Senators and will celebrate his 67th birthday on Feb. 15—over half a century with hockey as a player, coach, manager and even a referee.

The Ottawa-born youngster stepped into professional play with an illustrious lineup. Included among Clancy's first clubmates with Ottawa Senators were seven players who have since joined him in the Hockey Hall of Fame: Clint Benedict, Punch Broadbent, Cy Denneny, George "Buck" Boucher, Frank Nighbor, Eddie Gerard and Frank Boucher.

Clancy scored 137 goals and had 143 assists in 15 seasons as a player in the NHL.

After his last season with Senators, in which he scored 17 goals and 23 assists in a 44-game schedule, Conn Smythe decided that here was the man that Toronto Maple Leafs needed as a leader.

Smythe promptly offered the financially-pressed Senators the then unheard-of sum of $35,000 as well as Art Smith and Eric Pettinger to bring Clancy to the Leafs.

It has since been described as "the best deal in hockey."

Led by Clancy, Toronto, which finished fourth in the previous season, placed first three times and second three times in the six seasons that the lively Irishman played with them before retiring.

After retiring as a player in 1936, he coached Montreal Maroons for the first half of the 1937-38 season before assuming the role of an NHL referee for several seasons.

One who had mastered every trick to stretch the rules as a player, and a constant referee-baiter, Clancy was surprised when NHL president Frank Calder asked him to become a man in stripes.

"I guess that he thought it would work to set a thief to catch a thief," quipped Clancy.

He left refereeing to coach Leafs between 1950 and 1953, moved up to assistant manager and was Punch Imlach's right-hand man for Stanley Cup victories in 1962, 1963, 1964 and 1967.

One of the most-sought-after after-dinner speakers around, Clancy is a man whose career knows no equal and one who has just the right touch in recounting its highlights.

Tickets are now available for the dinner, which will again fete Victoria's sports personality of the year as well as the most outstanding male and female athletes.

The cost is $10 and tickets are available from members of the Victoria Sports Council and the Saanich Kiwanis Club, co-sponsors of the event.

Furious Finish Rescues Eagles

SALT LAKE CITY (CP) — Salt Lake City whipped up five unanswered goals in the third period Wednesday night for a stunning 6-6 tie with Vancouver Canucks, the Western Hockey League leaders.

Canucks led 4-1 after the first period and were up 6-1 after two before veteran centre Guyle Fielder, the all-time scoring leader in the WHL, snapped Golden Eagles back to life.

Fielder netted two goals and assisted on two more as his club counted four goals in 4½ minutes of the final period before 4,011 fans.

Brazilians Claim Training Record

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — A Brazilian horse trainer has won 2,876 horse races, and his feat is being heralded here as a world record.

De Freitas, 70, started his career as a horse trainer in 1924, and has already won the Rio de Janeiro horse trainers' individual title 25 times.

Max Hirsch, who was said to be leading trainer in the United States prior to his death at age 88 last year, finished with 1,934 victories in his 67-year career.

Sanderson's Leg Gets Second Look

BOSTON (AP) — Centre Derek Sanderson of Boston Bruins has returned to Boston for further examination of a leg injury. The National Hockey League club, currently in the midst of a road trip, said Tuesday night his return to the lineup is indefinite at this time.

The exact nature of Sanderson's trouble has not been determined. Trainer Dan Canney said it might be either a muscle pull or a strain.

Victim Believed Trying for Gun

CLARKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski may have been trying to reach for a bedside shotgun to ward off his killers before he was gunned down along with his wife and daughter, state police Capt. Joseph Snyder said at a news conference Wednesday.

"Underneath Yablonski's body," Snyder said, "were a number of shotgun shells."

Snyder also said two guns were found in Yablonski's room, the shotgun and a .22-calibre rifle.

Investigators also found a .30-calibre copper-jacketed slug. Police said earlier Yablonski and his wife and daughter died of .38-calibre bullet wounds.

In all 11 slugs were found in the bodies and in various parts of the bedrooms where the bodies were found Monday.

FBI agents have been ordered to join state police in their investigation on the order of United States Attorney-General John N. Mitchell.

Snyder said his men were not pursuing any particular theory on the case, referring to charges by Yablonski's two sons that the slayings were linked to their father's unsuccessful bid for the presidency of the UMW last month.

"I wouldn't say the slayings had anything to do with union matters or that they didn't," Snyder said. "We are investigating every angle."

The pyjama-clad bodies of Yablonski, 59, his wife Margaret, 57, and their 25-year-old daughter Charlotte, were found Monday afternoon in bedrooms of the family's rural home in this southwestern Pennsylvania coal mining town 35 miles south of Pittsburgh.

SHOT WITH PISTOL

Authorities said all three had been shot with a .38-calibre pistol—Yablonski five times and the two women twice—three or four days earlier.

Mitchell ordered the FBI into the case to "determine whether . . . the three deaths in any way involve federally protected rights of labor union members." Federal assistance had been requested by Yablonski's sons and Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond Shafer.

In a statement, the sons, Kenneth and Joseph Yablonski, charged the killings were the work of "professional assassins."

"There are no doubts that these horrible misdeeds are an outgrowth of our father's most recent bid to win election to the presidency of the United Mine Workers of America," the brothers said.

Rings Stolen

VANCOUVER (CP) —Police said diamond rings valued at $7,000-$8,000 were stolen Tuesday from a jewelry store in downtown Vancouver. Millers Jewellers Ltd. said a tray containing 24 engagement rings was missing from a display case.

SHOP CENTRE IN SAANICH APPROVED

A building permit application for a major shopping centre in Saanich was made to the municipality Tuesday.

The centre will be built by A and B Construction Co. of Nanaimo, at McKenzie Avenue between Shelbourne and Cedar Hill. It will be called University Heights Shopping Centre and will cost $1.6 million.

A building department spokesman in Saanich said it will take several days to check over plans to ensure they are in order before the building permit is issued and construction can start.

Students Frozen Out

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Thirty-five Grade 4 children at nearby Grandhaven Elementary School have been frozen out of their classroom. The children stayed home Tuesday after trying to work in coats, boots and gloves. Some of them have frostbitten fingers and toes. The heating system in their portable classroom is inadequate and the temperature dropped to 25 degrees inside.

Daughter Saved

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters) — A 61-year-old grandfather grabbed a six-foot kangaroo in a wrestling hold Monday after it attacked his daughter and her young child at a zoo 30 miles from here. The animal later was shot.

Local Troops Head for Norway for Training

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian battalion group will participate in a large-scale NATO training exercise in northern Norway Feb. 24 to March 15, the defence department announced Wednesday.

The group will consist of the 1st battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, plus support elements: some 900 troops. In addition a variety of vehicles including armored personnel carriers and snow vehicles will be involved.

The Canadian troops and vehicles will be airlifted to Norway by air transport command Yukon and Hercules aircraft. The airlift will originate from Victoria, Calgary, Winnipeg and Ottawa.

The exercise, dubbed Arctic Express, is designed to test procedures for deploying the multi-national mobile force of Allied Command Europe earmarked for action on NATO's northern flank in the event of Soviet aggression there.

Participating with the Canadians will be Norwegian, British, Italian and United States forces. The exercise will take place some 200 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Based at Work Point Barracks, Esquimalt, B.C., the QOR 1st battalion is assigned to the allied northern force on a standby basis.

Commanding the group is Lt.-Col. T. M. C. Marsaw of London, Ont. Support units are drawn from the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, Winnipeg; the Royal Canadian Engineers, Chilliwack, B.C.; the Calgary armed forces base, and the helicopter operational training squadron at Petawawa, Ont.

PAIR WIN NATIONAL AWARDS

Ontario City Low-Budget Film Capital

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London is fast developing as a centre for personal low-budget film making with two film-makers winning two of four awards presented in 1968 in a national competition.

Jack Chambers, who is also an artist, and Keewatin Dewdney both won $1,500 in Canadian Artists '68, a competition with 126 films entered. Both are active in the London Film Co-op which distributes personal films throughout Canada.

London also has a film-making course at a local high school which should increase the number of film-makers from the city. There are six whose works are available for showing but there are believed to be many more.

Personal films at one time were lumped in with underground films. The term underground was a catch word, said to have originated in New York and, when it became common, it usually referred to films with a "blue" theme or association.

Personal films have "come to mean an art form using film as a creative exercise like poetry, literature, painting or sculpture," Chambers says.

One of Chambers' films, Circle 4, captures the full circle of the seasons in one year with the camera focused on one spot in his garden.

"My camera was set up at a window looking into my yard and it stayed there for 365 consecutive days, never being moved," Chambers said. "The aperture and exposure always remained the same. I shot two feet of film at the same time each day for the 365 days. The colors alone, resulting from the varying degrees of sunlight, are an interesting study in themselves. Yet they are nothing more than the eyes see."

Fraser Boa won his award for a picture titled Chambers R 34. In making the film he almost became part of Chambers art studio—a situation that established film companies, such as the National Film Board, might find expensive or impossible. Both men consulted constantly on the film.

It started with a canvas of Chambers' prize-winning painting, Regatta, and carries on in time right up to the ceremony when Ontario Premier John Robarts presented Chambers with the award. The movie cost Boa $9,400 and occupied every spare minute of his time for 17 months, except for a few weeks when he hadn't money to buy film.

The London co-op has refused to merge with a national organization because "we want to keep our identity," says Chambers.

"By keeping our own identity, each artist here can be his own man," he says. "That's the way we want it to be as far as the Canadian scene is concerned."

Pornography 'An Insight Into Humans

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Dr. Morse Peckham flicked his grey beard, bit down on the cigarette holder and, from behind a cloud of smoke, said: "It is wrong to judge pornography as something that is all about sex—it can be an insight into human beings."

The University of South Carolina English professor, author of a new book entitled Art and Pornography, said he had no great interest in pornography when he started work on his book. Later, he said, he found the subject "one of extraordinary intellectual experience—an opportunity to gain an insight of human beings."

He said pornography is viewed differently by the intellectual, who believes in innovation, and the anti-intellectual, who believes in social stability.

The intellectual is hesitant to admit that art can be pornographic, he said, and it is "mere carelessness on the part of literary critics to say that pornography cannot be literature and cannot be art."

The anti-intellectual, he said, refuses to admit that anything pornographic can be art and "wants to ban pornography in public while enjoying it in private. He feels he must maintain the morality of the community."

Family Not Suing Kennedy

BERKELEY HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — The father of Mary Jo Kopechne, who died in an auto accident involving Senator Edward M. Kennedy, described as untrue today a report in the Hartford, Conn., Courant that he and his wife are considering suing Kennedy.

"There's no basis to that at all," Joseph Kopechne said of the newspaper story.

"I think there's some type of insurance on the car that the lawyer will settle with," he added. "It's all in his (the lawyer's) hands."

When asked whether he and his wife planned to sue Kennedy or any member of the Kennedy family, Kopechne said: "No, not at all."

Concerning the Hartford Courant story, the Kopechne's lawyer, Joseph Flanagan of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., earlier said: "I am not in a position at this time to discuss any negotiations we have had or if negotiations have taken place."

Inquest Likely To End Today

By RONALD BATCHELOR

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (Reuters) — The inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne is expected to end today, but further court actions could still confront Sen. Edward Kennedy.

The four-day secret hearing into the circumstances surrounding the drowning of Miss Kopechne in the senator's car on Chappaquiddick Island in July wound toward its close amid indications that the last of the Kennedy brothers might yet have to face criminal charges.

Kennedy already has been convicted of leaving the scene of the accident—a charge to which he pleaded guilty here July 25 and received a two-month suspended jail sentence.

District Attorney Edmund Dinis, who ordered the inquest, and his staff were reported considering whether sufficient evidence had been obtained this week to seek a grand jury indictment against the senator for "driving to endanger the lives of others."

This charge under state law would constitute a misdemeanor, punishable on conviction with a maximum jail term of two years.

But a jury would convict on such a charge only if it were convinced by prosecution evidence that Kennedy had displayed a "negligent attitude" while driving.

SHOWS NEGLIGENCE?

Some members of the district attorney's staff are known to hold the opinion that the senator's failure to report the accident for eight or nine hours indicated negligence.

Kennedy was reported to feel that he would be indicted by the inquest hearing and wanted the transcript of this week's hearings published as soon as possible.

But it may be weeks, even months, before the transcript is released by the state Superior Court and the full story of Chappaquiddick opened for public examination.

There were unconfirmed reports that Kennedy told the closed door inquiry before Judge James A. Boyle, when he testified Monday, that his failure to report the accident immediately was due to shock, bewilderment and confusion.

Much will depend on the assessment of his testimony by Judge Boyle who will submit a report with a full record of the inquest to the Superior Court.

But, the district attorney and the county grand jury which is still technically in session can, if they consider it necessary, procede with an independent investigation and possibly bring charges against the senator.

WOMEN TO TESTIFY

The inquest—shrouded in tight secrecy and conducted amid a bizarre atmosphere of television and newspaper publicity and press agentry outside the courtroom—was likely to end with the testimony of five women campaign aides of the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Dubbed the "boiler room girls," they and Miss Kopechne attended a reunion barbecue party with Edward Kennedy and five close men friends on Chappaquiddick the night of the accident.

Miss Kopechne was driving with the senator from the party when his car plunged off a narrow wooden bridge spanning a 10-foot-deep creek. The senator managed to escape from the submerged car but Miss Kopechne was trapped in the rear of the vehicle and was drowned.

Two other witnesses might also be called to give evidence before the inquest is finally closed.

One is Dun Gifford, Kennedy's Washington legislative assistant who made the arrangements to transport Miss Kopechne's body to Pennsylvania for burial the day after its recovery from the car.

Five Named To Contest Labor Post

Five men including incumbent Jack Groves were nominated Wednesday for the post of president in forthcoming Victoria Labor Council elections.

More nominations may be accepted at the next meeting, when ballots will be cast.

Groves, of International Woodworkers of America, was named with carpenter's delegate John Schibli, public employees' union delegate Lew Eckford, VLC secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan, and Larry Tickner, also of the carpenter's union.

Schibli, incumbent first vice-president of the council, also was re-nominated for that post, and Ryan for the secretary-treasurer's position.

In other business, the council heard a motion urging B.C. Federation of Labor to inquire into feasibility of having an auto insurance plan sponsored by the trade union movement; protested forthcoming electricity and transit rate increases as unwanted, unnecessary and inflationary; stood for a silent minute in memory of long-time unionist Robert Noble, an original member of the labor council and former machinist's business agent, who died Dec. 31 in his 86th year.

Beekeepers Blame Bears, Sting Experts

Shooting bears is not the answer for controlling the animal—a nuisance to beekeepers and campers in summer, B.C. fish and wildlife officers said Wednesday.

Some Vancouver Island apiarists want bears strictly controlled, claiming last year they caused about $44,000 worth of damage to bee colonies situated in fireweed areas.

Give a bear a taste of honey, they say, and he will raid every colony he runs across.

Don Robinson, assistant director of the wildlife branch, said a proposal to kill bears off in all areas where they cause trouble would mean practically exterminating them from B.C. forest lands.

"This is not acceptable to us," he said.

He felt a lot of the trouble could be avoided if beekeepers built solid electric fences around their bee colonies.

Campers also shouldn't leave food around, he said.

When bears became a nuisance, Robinson said, the practice was to trap and release them in a remote wilderness area.

The biologist said bears are unpredictable and should be left alone—not befriended as some people attempt.

"Bears have killed and injured people," he said. "On the other hand there are no records that wolves or cougars have killed people in British Columbia—yet these two animals are feared the most.

Land Allotted

EDMONTON (CP) — The Hutterian Brethren of Rock Lake will be allowed to purchase 5,000 acres of land 40 miles southeast of Calgary for a new colony, the Alberta government announced Wednesday. Land purchases by the sect are controlled by the government.

Victoria Yachtsman Still Missing

The search is intensifying for former Victorian Jim Quinn, 44, and British lawyer Ian C. Bond whose yacht is overdue after leaving Hong Kong 19 days ago.

The $25,000 Chinese junk, built there in 1967 and named Jimmy's Junk was due in Manila about Dec. 20.

AIR ALERT

Today a spokesman of the U.S. Air Force Sea and Air Rescue Squadron, based at Clark Airfield, 40 miles north of Manila, said an alert had gone out to commerical airliners and air force units from Japan to Singapore in an effort to locate the 53-foot converted junk.

Rescue centres in Manila, Hong Kong and Taiwan are monitoring all frequencies available to Quinn's radio, in addition to the international S.O.S. frequency.

Harbor masters in the Philippines, Taiwan and Hong Kong have been ordered to search their harbors but have been unable to find any sign of news of the yacht.

FEAR CAPTURE

Yacht club officials said many visiting yachtsmen often change their destinations but in Quinn's case they feared his ship had been captured by Communist Chinese patrol craft.

Quinn, former owner of the Crest Motor Inn, in downtown Victoria sold his motel in 1964 in order to realize his dream of building a boat and sailing around the world.

Contacted today, his brother, Ken Quinn of Port Moody, said he had appointed an Ottawa lawyer to represent the missing yachtsman.

Jimmy's Junk, whose ultimate destination was to be Vancouver, carried enough fuel for 5,000 miles steaming on her high-powered Rolls Royce diesel engine and sufficent provisions to last three months.

Quinn's companion is said to be about 25 and to hail from Durham, Eng.

'INCOMPATIBLE WITH PEACE'

Prosperity Impairs Health

HALIFAX (CP) — National prosperity is incompatible with human welfare, Dr. Donald Dodds, an ecologist at Acadia University in Wolfville, N.S., says.

National prosperity as a goal is incompatible with a quality environment, he said in a lecture here.

It impaired physical and mental health, created stress, required sacrifice of personal freedom, increased international competition for resources and was not conducive to world peace.

"Some of the American dreams are turning into nightmares. General Motors operates on a budget greater than any world government, except the United States and the U.S.S.R."

Industrial empires were nurtured by an advertising industry which created champagne tastes in people with beer incomes.

The common man felt inferior if he did not have an American-made 400-horsepower death trap on wheels and color television.

"In Saskatchewan there are more television sets than houses with indoor bathrooms," he said. The tendency was to get the car and build the garage around it or to get the TV and build the house around it.

Dr. Dodds said regional disparity such as Nova Scotia suffered was caused by population distribution and he wondered if an industrialized province was the answer.

"We need a limited industrial growth here, based primarily on our own resources without over-exploitation. We need an agriculture growing base but we must have it without hard pesticides.

"Citizens must insist on prevention of gross pollution."

As early as 1961, animals in Nova Scotia were carrying pesticide residues.

"Millions of individual animals, including a few human beings, have died from pesticide poisoning in North America. We do know pesticides and herbicides can completely destroy our environment."

Dr. Dodds said man's major problem was to prevent his self-inflicted disease from becoming malignant.

Cafes Want Tap Beer

A spokesman for the Canadian Restaurant Association said Wednesday his organization wants to see draft beer available in any restaurant.

"Is there something sacred about draft beer that it can only be served in beverage rooms? That doesn't make sense to the public," said lawyer R. P. Anderson in a presentation to the Royal Commission inquiring into B.C.'s drinking laws.

The commission hearings, at the Victoria Law Courts, are expected to conclude later today or Friday and chairman Judge Charles Morrow has indicated its report to the government will likely be ready next month.

'SUBSIDY'

Earlier Wednesday lawyer Boyd Ferris, speaking for the B.C. Hotels Association, said the tax structure on draft beer in effect subsidizes beer parlors because the government recognizes them as "the working man's club."

There is no sales tax to the drinker on draft beer but there is on bottled beer. The government markup on bottled beer is $1 for two dozen while it is just over $3 a keg of draft beer which is about six times the volume.

The most spirited moment in Wednesday's hearing came late in the afternoon when a young Portuguese, Jose Pinto, and commissioner Archbishop Martin Johnson debated the value of a minimum drinking age limit.

Pinto is a reformed alcoholic now counselling at the Salvation Army's Harbor Light Centre in Vancouver and he spoke against lowering the limit from 21.

NO 'PREACHING'

But he also said he just gives young people with drinking problems the facts when talking to them and doesn't preach.

Johnson said he would pray Pinto and others in the temperance movement, together with churches, would unite in that sort of education movement.

CHALLENGE

"I believe you actually do harm to your cause when you call for new rules," the archbishop told him. Counsellors tell him that the age limit is just seen as a challenge by those under it, he added.

Drop it from 21 to 19 and it just becomes a challenge for those 15 to 18.

Pinto agreed that everyone has to make his own mind up on drinking—"otherwise it will never work."

But he stuck to his argument in favor of a minimum age limit and noted in his native Portugal and in France where there are no such restrictions, there are many more alcoholics.

YOUNGSTERS DRINK

In Portugal you can buy liquor at age 10 if you have the money, he said, and instead of a coffee break after school the youngsters drink wine.

Commissioner Ed Lawson took issue with E. D. McRae, executive director of the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., when McRae recommended strict limits on liquor advertising over television.

A more consistent stand, suggested Lawson, would be to oppose such advertising in newspapers and periodicals as well.

MrRae argued newspapers didn't intrude on the individual's privacy as does TV, that TV liquor ads would't be used unless they were effective and raised alcohol consumption.

He suggested the drinking age should be lowered to 19, which would recognize common practice and assist in controlling it.

And he expressed the fear that the current spate of illegal drug use is distracting attention from the most common drug abuse, overindulgence in alcohol.

He told the commission he did see a ray of hope, the implementation of sound education programs.

Saanich To Hold Housing Huddle

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council will hold a freewheeling discussion on housing Monday night.

Conflicting opinions are held by council members as to how involved the municipality should become in housing, and just what it should be doing to encourage it.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. in the municipal hall and is open to the public.

During 1969, housing construction declined in Saanich at a time when the municipality was calling attention to a housing crisis and establishing a municipal housing committee to tackle the problem.

The municipality ran into several frustrations—most of the year spent in endless meetings about duplexes; a temporary freeze was put on apartments until a planning department study was made public, but council has not adopted the report to date; and the usual problems of the high cost of houses, climbing interest rates and shortage of sewered land.

Building permits were issued for 385 houses—down 85 from the previous year.

This represented a drop of $1.1 million in permit values.

Duplexes increased—55 last year against 33 in the previous year—and apartment suites were slightly ahead, 209 against 196.

The total number of units of accommodation was down—649 last year compared with 699 in 1968.

Another complication in Saanich is that the zoning bylaw is being overhauled. This work has still to be completed before coming to council for attention.

The housing committee has recommended, and council approved, a resolution asking that highest priority be given to providing the framework and zoning which would promote residential development in 1970.

One council member thought this sounded like a "motherhood" motion.

Two other council members said what the resolution really means is that Saanich should get on with the job, and do in 1970 what wasn't done in 1969.

At least one of the frustrations is almost out of the way — for the time being. Only final reading is necessary for a bylaw which will mean that all future duplex construction must first be approved by the rezoning process — and comply with more stringent regulations.

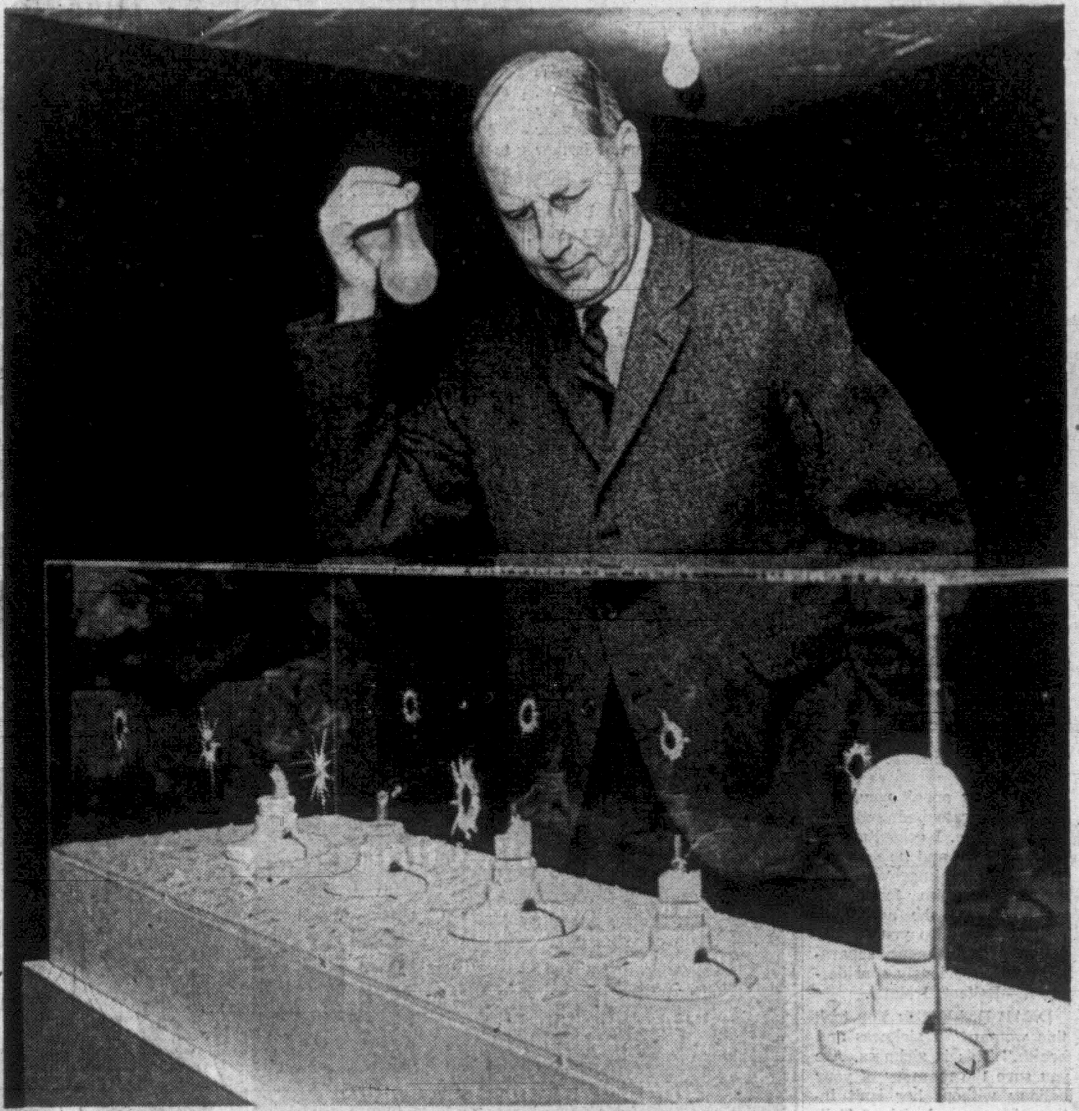
Depending on viewpoint, the move is either to disperse duplexes so rows of them are not built — or make it so tough to get a duplex approved that most builders won't bother.

Another frustration — lack of sewered land — is being overcome with work almost under way on the start of sewering 3,400 acres — three-quarters the size of Victoria city — which Saanich is confident can be done within four years.



READY, IN CASE the last bulb is shot out and, as the artist might say, the world is left in darkness, Colin Graham, curator of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, surveys the gallery's latest acquisition, called "Lights Out." It was given to the gallery by U.S. sculptor Philip McCracken and the bullet-riddled plexiglas case and four shot-out light bulbs are not supposed to be particularly esthetically pleasing — supposed to turn you off, in fact. The piece was produced with overtones of the assassinations of Amerian political leaders. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

Gaglardi Won't Reveal Extent Of Welfare Cuts

Claims Informers Name Lawbreakers

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi today declined to say how many persons have been cut off the welfare rolls for illegal practices since he became minister in October.

"I couldn't give a figure and I wouldn't want to do that," he said, adding that "every day" he gets calls from people telling of welfare recipients who shouldn't be receiving welfare.

Gaglardi had said earlier that such recipients have been "falling like flies" from the welfare rolls.

He said today he knew of one case where an individual was receiving $5,000 a year in income in addition to welfare benefits.

"These are the names I'm after," Gaglardi said in a telephone interview from his Vancouver office.

Asked whether he would reply to criticism of his welfare statements from the Victoria Labour Council and Reg Clarkson, executive secretary of the Victoria Low Income Group, Gaglardi said:

"I have to be responsible to the public. There are millions of dollars being spent in my department and I want to see that we get value for every dollar."

PARTIES AND WHISKY

He said that people don't want him giving away money "for parties and pouring whisky . . ."

As for strong words used by Clarkson in criticizing his view of welfare recipients, Gaglardi said:

"I'm used to people like him making statements about me. He characterizes himself by what he says."

NO ILLUSIONS

Gaglardi said he knows what he is talking about when he refers to welfare recipients.

"I haven't got any illusions," he said. "I'm in a position to pick up both sides of this question."

Since he didn't require any education on what welfare recipients are really like, he doubted he would be attending the Jan. 16 meeting of the Victoria Low Income Group to which he is being invited.

"I have staff people who can handle these matters," he said, adding that he hasn't received any invitation yet. It was to be sent today.

NOT ASKED YET

Gaglardi said he hasn't yet been asked to appear before the Senate committee on poverty in May but indicated he may have something to say if he is asked to appear.

An Ottawa report says provincial welfare ministers will be invited to testify before the committee.

RIGHT, WRONG THING

Gaglardi said he is doing the right thing in trying to get rid of people on welfare who shouldn't be there.

"If doing the right thing is improper then I am improper. If doing the right thing is wrong, then I'm wrong."

'WE ARE UP IN ARMS'

Resignation of Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi was called for Wednesday by Victoria Labor Council because of his "Inhumanitarian approach" to the job.

Delegates passed a resolution arising from an executive committee discussion and framed by IWA delegate Joe Fowler, who said "we are up in arms. I'm up in arms."

He said exception was taken to quoted remarks of the minister relating to elimination of some recipients from welfare rolls. For example, "they're falling like flies," and "deadwood in charitable organizations should be eliminated."

Fowler said Gaglardi "shouldn't be saying these things where human beings are "concerned." He deplored the minister's dictatorial attitude.

"If we had a responsible government people wouldn't be put in this predicament," Fowler said.

WEAK RECORD

"When he was minister of highways, his record wasn't very favorable there either," Fowler added.

Delegate Larry Tickner said he thought the council would be overstepping to pass the resolution, which will be forwarded to B.C. Federation of Labor.

He said it was the working class, which the council represents, that elected the Social Credit government in August.

"I don't think it is up to us to go against the working class (which) elected the Social Credit government with a clear majority. It was their will." Tickner said.

He said he was sympathetic to the motion, but perhaps more appropriate action might be to "give the working class 30 lashes with a wet noodle."

BLOOD CLINICS ORGANIZED

Red Cross officials announced today that three blood donor clinics will be held in late January.

The first will be held 2:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 9 p.m. in Red Cross House Jan. 19; the second, 1:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Red Cross House, Jan. 20.

On Jan. 21 clinics will be held in the nurses' residence of Royal Jubilee Hospital from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Inflation Like War Crisis And Getting Worse—Plumbers

Canada's housing and inflation crises may have reached wartime emergency proportions, say the leaders of the national plumbing and mechanical contracting industry.

Harry Briggs of Montreal, and John Long of Toronto, are visiting Victoria as president and executive vice-president, respectively, of the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association.

"The real pressure on our industry is inflation, and that affects all construction," said Briggs in commenting on local reaction to high wage proposals by construction tradesmen.

"If we are forced to give in to our men, we only pass it along to the public and therefore increase the (inflation) spiral.

"Voluntary restraint sounds fine, but is very impractical," he sad.

"I think there should be some price controls at the manufacturer's level," said Long.

When asked whether this might also be impractical and constitute a return to the heavily-administered wartime price controls', Long said: "Maybe that's the kind of emergency we are in now."

Briggs said the government is the worst offender when it comes to spending, and is not showing the country a clear example in restraint.

The two men are making a national tour to visit local and provincial plumbing and mechanical contractor associations, partly to stimulate interest in the work of the association and to get reaction to proposals of the federal White Paper on taxation.

The national association is making a formal presentation to the government on taxation, probably by the end of February, and dealing with the effect of White Paper proposals on closely-held companies, capital gains tax, depreciation and capital cost allowances and the effect of intended legislation on the association itself.

The association expects its affiliates to provide some White Paper criticism and urges individual members to submit their own thoughts directly to Finance Minister Benson. "Be constructive," said Briggs. "Even amateurs can come up with good ideas."

Briggs said the association does not oppose a true capital gains tax. But he was of the personal opinion that there should be no tax on theoretical gain and that there should be allowance made for that part lost through inflation.

EASE CURBS

Investment limitations should be eased to enable companies to make provision for income reserves that would cover potential losses in a bad construction year or because of extended strikes.

Taxation of small businesses in the same way as larger ones, as proposed, would be especially hard on the majority of members in the association, said Long. He said 62 per cent of all plumbing and mechanical contracting work in the industry is done by a small minority (about 160) of the 6,000 members, while the rest account for less than $100,000 each, per year.

BRIGGS
. . . need price control

On rising costs in the industry, especially labor, Long said the government can be of help in bringing balance back to the bargaining table by providing at the provincial level for accreditation of associations of industry with bargaining powers to match those of unions.

Only in Quebec is this possible at present, he said.

He also felt the establishment of labor courts would solve the dilemma felt in industry when a union rejects economic arguments against wage increases.

Chargex Sparks Labor Difference

Victoria Labor Council Wednesday found itself at odds with Canadian Labor Congress over its protest that Chargex helps to inflame inflation.

A month ago the council wrote to the CLC suggesting that the bank-sponsored credit plan was not in the best interests of the working people and was heating up the economy unduly.

The council also suggested the CLC discuss Chargex with the prices and incomes commission to see whether it is an inflationary factor.

"Obviously we took the wrong line," commented VLC secretary Larry Ryan after reading a reply from CLC secretary-treasurer William Dodge, who said the CLC research department found that to restrict credit now would only increase the degree of restraint in the economy.

Dodge said this conflicts with CLC's position that the government "should now seriously consider moderating the present degree of restraint" as Canada had entered or was about to enter a period of recession.

More restraint would only restrict output and employment further, the CLC said.

Diphtheria Shots Urged By City Health Official

Whitbread made the statement following reports on the ninth diphtheria case in less than a month in the B.C. Interior. One case was at Hazelton, the others at Burns Lake. A three-year-old girl died.

CHECK WITH DOCTOR

Whitbread said parents should check with their family doctors or with their closest public health offic. Health offices are listed in the telephone directory yellow pages.

"I'm sure most children are up to date with their shots," Whitbread said. "but those who are not should be brought up to date immediately either via their own doctor or at the nearest clinic."

Symptoms of diphtheria are a sore throat, headache, temperature, difficulty in breathing and the appearance of a whitish membrane in the throat.

Even the Coffee Getting Inflated

About five Victoria area restaurants have raised the price of coffee from 15 to 20 cents a cup and more are expected to follow suit soon.

Victoria Restaurant Association President Bill Webb said today a general increase to 20 cents is in effect in Vancouver.

"Prime factors contributing to the increase are labor costs and an increase in coffee prices. We've made inquiries and have found that the trees were damaged by frost and many killed by the drought which followed. Others have been planted but it will be 1½ years before they start producing."

He added that a 10 per cent increase in the cost of dishes, cutlery and coffee-making machines that went into effect Dec. 1 also helped force the price up.

Arthur Mayse . . .

MAYOR ELFORD HAS told Oak Bay residents that if they disapprove of secret council meetings, they can let their municipal government know. I trust the Tweedies will accept this challenge with a roar that will be heard even unto Esquimalt, which has also seen fit to persist in the closed-door policy.

Not for all of each meeting, mind. But the two councils mean to decide what portion of their deliberations should be heard by the press.

The council that goes in for this brand of censorshhip makes itself automatically suspect. In enlightened government circles this fact is recognized, and the reporters are permitted to retain in confidence matters that demand confidential treatment until resolved.

Where this practice isn't followed, it's natural to wonder why.

Is the in-camera meeting decreed merely to shield mayors and aldermen from the criticism that some piece of mistaken judgment, high-handedness or even plain fat-headedness might draw from a disapproving public?

Mayor Young of Esquimalt failed to state the entire proposition when he said in a recent press statement, "We're elected to govern the people and if they feel we're doing something wrong, they can throw us out of office at the next election."

Elected to govern, true; but not under a cone of silence. Insistence on so doing could result in the throwing-out to which his worship refers.

HERE AND THERE IN this January town, gardeners are already planning what they'll plant when comes the jolly springtime. As one of them, I'm intrigued by a Washington Post piece on new varieties of vegetable and flower that may be available.

The list includes a deep rose giant early-flowering morning glory, double geraniums that can be grown from seed, a hybrid, multi-colored snapdragon called "Madame Butterfly," and of all things, a yellow beet.

I find it hard to envision a yellow beet, and the story claims that "Burpee's Golden" has to be seen to be believed.

Says originator Burpee, who heads the American seed company that bears his name:

"The golden, tender roots are delicious. They do not bleed like red beets, and the luscious green tops taste better than spinach."

In case that toothsome description hasn't wakened the gardener in you, here also is a medal-winning hybrid cherry tomato. It goes by the name of "Small Fry," and provokes a veritable rhapsody. We're told its yield ripens much earlier than that of the regular cherry tomato, that it grows to a height of about 30 inches, and that it bears clusters of seven or eight one-inch bright red orbs.

"Small Fry" should appeal to balcony and patio gardeners," runs the script, "because it can be grown in tubs and pots."

Very nice, and I hope all these newcomers will be available in Canada. Especially those yellow beets whose tops taste better than spinach.

As what even halfway edible green doesn't!

EACH CHRISTMAS EVE, I've offered a set of holly-bordered verses instead of a column, and putting modesty aside, let me report that the last poem brought me some fan mail.

The first letter comes from R. Lamont.

"In Times Dec. 24 read your gibberish about Joseph being old and grey to father Jesus. In the first place God was the father of Jesus. In the second place Joseph was a young man at the time, for Jesus' brothers and sisters were born after him and not converted till He rose from the dead, and they gave Him a hard time as the saved are today in this sin-cursed world."

And from Mrs. Vera Milan, 1035 Richmond Avenue, to the Times:

"On Dec. 24 you had a poem by Arthur Mayse in your paper. Who is Arthur Mayse and who is Hippon the Greek? I would be grateful for the information.

"PS. Perhaps next year you might choose a poem more scriptural for the occasion."

By way of answer, I've never been entirely sure who the first-named party is. But Hippon, whose name means "horseman," turned up in my head a couple of months ago, and insisted on insinuating his shrewd presence into one of the lovelier, if unscriptural, legends of the Christ-child.

As for Joseph, who knows? I can but cite scholarly opinion that his earthly children were born of a first marriage, that Mary was his second wife, that he died before Christ began his ministry, and that he is often portrayed as a man well-advanced in years.

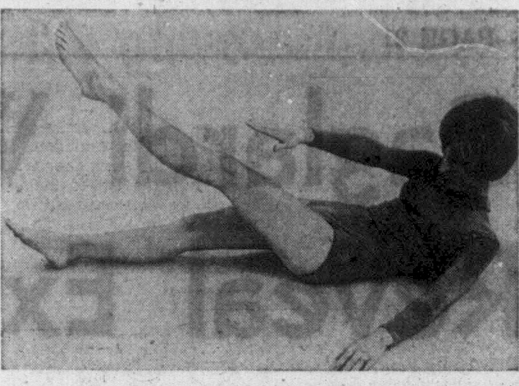
Restraint Works Wonders

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN



This is a mild abdominal exercise. Lie on your back with your legs straight and your arms resting on the floor at your sides. Lift your head and shoulders as you raise your left leg from the floor and reach toward your left leg with your right arm. Hold for a count of four and return to starting position. This time raise your right leg and reach with your left arm. Your back remains on floor. Continue alternating, five times with each leg.

Do you want to lose from 15 to 20 pounds in the next eight weeks?

Perhaps you wish to lose less or maybe more but whatever overweight you may have is aging. It can make a young woman appear middle-aged and one at mid-life looks years older than she is. It also affects the way you feel and act and react.

Why procrastinate longer? This is the fourth article of my beauty improvement plan. If you have been following it, you know how many calories you should have and have measured and weighed yourself.

It would be great if extra pounds would just simply disappear. Unfortunately, it doesn't work that way. We have to give them a little push with diet and exercise.

Losing weight is simply a question of mathematics. I was never very good in that subject but I can figure this one out for you.

When you eat more food than your body requires for heat and energy, the leftover is stored as fat. When you eat less than your body needs, the deposits of fat are called upon to fill the deficit and you lose weight.

You do not have to starve or try fad diets. The most successful reducers increase their physical activity and cut down on their food intake. This is the magic formula. A little of each adds up to a stunning total over a fairly short period of time.

As a small example, if you burn up 150 to 200 calories in a brisk walk and then leave off one doughnut or cream puff you will have won around 350 calories in your battle to lose weight.

Day after day it adds up to an impressive amount.

The way we spend our calories in the selection of food is always important to health and good looks. This is reducing and eating less. It's especially true when we are imperative that we use the allowable calories on vital items.

Soon I will help you plan your own reducing menus, but in the meantime follow the ones I have here. With larger helpings and a few additions you can use them for your family, too.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Airmail Announcement

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our 20-year-old daughter who attends a college in another state rang us up this morning to tell us that she and her boyfriend got married last night. They had planned to get married when they both finished college, but guess they couldn't wait that long.

I want to send our relatives and friends formal announcements of their marriage, but something just occurred to me. What if they had to get married in a hurry?—Colorado Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: In that case, send them airmail.

DEAR ABBY: After being married for 28 years to a dear, sweet, lovely, little woman, several months ago she was hit with something called change of life.

I found myself living with a complete stranger who only wanted to pick a row with me and go into a tantrum over the most trivial matters.

She refused to go on a holiday with me this year for the first time, so I went alone, and I must confess I had the best holiday of my life. When I came home after 12 days she was not the least bit glad to see me.

We hardly speak now, and are in separate bedrooms for the first time. I consulted our family doctor and he said my wife would not improve unless she visited him for treatments, which she absolutely refuses to do. Do you recommend a permanent separation? I am seriously considering it.—Belfast, Ireland.

DEAR BELFAST: You took this woman "in sickness and health." This is sickness. Are you sure the memory of your holiday without her isn't influencing your decision? Talk to your doctor again and ask for some suggestions on how to get this once dear, sweet, lovely woman to go for the treatment she so desperately needs. Don't desert her in her hour of need. Her condition may be temporary.

DEAR ABBY: Our ex-daughter-in-law has refused us the privilege of seeing our grandchildren. She claims that she has spoken to a psychiatrist, the school authorities, and even to her clergyman and they all agree that it would be in the best interests of the children if they were not to see us anymore.

The children are 8, 10, and 11. Our ex-daughter-in-law recently remarried, and our son agreed to let her new husband legally adopt the boys. We love these children, Abby, and this is breaking our hearts. It's true, our son was not the best husband and father in the world, but why should we be punished for his misdeeds?—Grandparents.

DEAR GRANDPARENTS: Knowing nothing of how your visits affect the children, I cannot say. Obviously the girl is punishing you along with your son, which seems unfair. But there are no rights for grandparents, and your former daughter-in-law is now holding all the trumps.

DEAR ABBY: I was amused at the letters you published from some of those women who remarked on the impotency of men of advanced age. They brought to mind a neighbor of mine who at age 90 announced that he had married! When talking to his son, I asked, "Why did your dad want to get married again at his age? The son replied, "He didn't want to. He had to." — Yours truly, Indianapolis Neighbor.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Scissor-Like Mold Shapes Meat Balls

By PENNY SAVER

"Have you ever used one of those meat-coating things?" asked Jayne one day.

"Not personally," I replied, "but once at a friend's I had chicken that had been coated and baked. I don't know whether it was the chicken itself or the coating, but it was delicious."

"Maybe I'll try it sometime. You see, I know this great meat-ball dish, but I think it would be even better if I cooked the meat-balls separately."

All the time we had been talking, Jayne had been mixing up a fish-cake recipe. Now the gooey, uncooked mixture was complete and she reached into a drawer and pulled out an odd-looking gadget.

"A meat-ball press," she answered when I asked. "It makes nice symetrical meat-balls and works just as well for other things that need shaping—like fish cakes or biscuits."

Her meat-ball press looks like a pair of heavy scissors topped with small ice cream scoops instead of blades. These shape the meat mixture into better balls than I could roll by hand.

This item costs $1.29.

I was amazed to discover when I investigated the meat coatings that there are at least three brands on the market. I had assumed (foolishly, I admit) that because I had only seen one kind advertised, that there was only one kind.

The most diverse brand comes in several different flavors: Italian flavor and mixtures designed to complement chicken, pork, fish and hamburger. A packet that will coat approximately one pound of meat cost 27 cents in one store I visited and 29 cents in another. Triple packs cost 73 cents.

The other brands seem more selective, usually coating only fish or chicken. But they were competitive in price.

All these coatings work on the principle that the meat, when coated and baked in the oven, will stay moist and flavorful and contain less grease than fried foods.

Jayne, by the way, tried the hamburger coating and loved it.

Speaking of foods that are shaped and moulded, Gladys was telling me about an interesting luncheon she had at a friend's. It was a fancy affair and the main course was a lobster dish much like fish cake.

"What really got me was that each of us had an individual cake shaped like a lobster. I asked the hostess later and she said she found the little moulds for 49 cents each. Other moulds of about the same size were shaped like butterflies or snail shells.

"She also found a big lobster mould, three or four times the size of the little ones, for $1.19. Shaping the dish to look like the animal whose meat it contains really tickled my fancy."

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon if you would like to know where to find these items.

Books

Chatelaine's Adventures in Cooking, compiled by the editors of Chatelaine magazine, is not for the last-minute housewife or the harried career wife. It is a cookbook written for those with time to to browse through its pages. It offers chapters for the bride, hints and recipes for parties of all kinds, an introduction to gourmet cooking as well as chapters on main dishes and vegetables. A recipe is not presented as just a recipe; the authors have explained what the cook does and why she should do it. Suggestions are also given as to how she could employ this new recipe in other ways.

For example, it is pointed out in the recipe for Creamed Chicken in Patty Shells, that the cook has mastered the basic recipe for white sauce and she may use it over a number of vegetables. Planning for 14 days of menus is given and seasonal variations are added. Sunday's roast beef appears in Thursday's Crisp Roast Beef Hash and time limits for storage of foods, left-over or otherwise, are handy guides.

It would be wise for the interested cook to mull over this book in the store, compare her basic recipes with those Chatelaine presents and then decide whether or not the little tidbits of information are worth the price. (Prentice-Hall of Canada, Ltd., $14.95.)

Doctor Suspects Pill As Stroke Victims Increase

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto brain surgeon says it is not yet clear if the birth control pill or just "coincidence" figures in the increasing number of strokes suffered by women on the pill.

Dr. William Lougheed of Toronto General Hospital, who Tuesday described a new method of replacing a blocked artery in the head of a stroke patient, said in an interview there are enough women in their 30s and 40s suffering strokes to make doctors suspect the pill.

He said one-third of women suffering strokes have a sudden blockage in a blood vessel which can cause paralysis in the brain affecting an arm or leg.

Another third suffer brief, temporary attacks such as loss of sight in one eye or inability to use a hand. He said this disappears in a few minutes, but usually occurs frequently.

The rest appear to have a slower, more generalized development of hardening of the arteries.

RISK IS HIGH

Dr. Lougheed said still others, members of families in which a number of relatives have suffered strokes, also face a high risk of a stroke because of a high fat content in the blood.

He said these persons, often young and healthy, stand to benefit most from his new surgical technique to restore circulation to blood-starved parts of the brain by bypassing a blocked artery with a section of leg vein.

Dr. Lougheed described such an operation, the first in the world, performed Dec. 5 at TGH on a 54-year-old Toronto woman who has since recovered.

Using new surgical equipment, the two operating teams headed by Dr. Lougheed spent 12 hours in bypassing the blocked carotid artery just above the neck with a section of the women's leg vein.

He said the vein was inserted into a small opening cut above the blocked section of the artery, threaded out and over the skull under the skin and then connected to the artery in the neck below the blockage, thus restoring normal blood flow.

Dr. Lougheed said his operation "won't restore paralysed patients," but it can prevent them from having additional strokes that could kill or paralyse them further.

Man Looks Forward To Synthetic Meals

SASKATOON (CP) — Synthetic foods are gradually providing consumers with cheap, nutritious alternatives to fresh foods, Dr. E. S. Humbert, professor of dairy science at the University of Saskatchewan, said recently.

Dr. Humbert told a meeting of a Saskatoon service club that synthetic fruit drinks and instant breakfasts are only the beginning of a long list of synthetic foods.

Most of the new foods have a soya bean base. Meatless meats, prepared from soya beans, are on sale in parts of the United States but they contain only vegetable protein which is inferior to animal protein, he said.

However, reasearch is being conducted to find a means of improving protein quality, said Dr. Humbert.

A person can remain healthy on a diet of synthetic meat, he said, providing the diet is supplemented with animal protein from cheese, eggs and fresh milk.

Dr. Humbert said it is not likely that soya beans could be grown successfully in Saskatchewan. Rapeseed could be used as a base for synthetic meats but the process would be expensive.

India Pioneers Techniques For Improving Child Diets

NEW DELHI (AP) — India, in which 80 per cent of the children are said to suffer from malnutrition, is pioneering in new techniques to improve child diets.

The program, now in its third year, includes extensive use of mass media to stress the importance of better diets, mobilization of the private food and drug industries, fortification of basic foods and strong support from the highest officials.

India is a land where traditions can't be ignored and where diets have changed little in centuries, so the task is not easy.

INCREASE QUALITY

Emphasis has been placed on increasing the quality of basic foods without changing their taste, color, texture — or cost.

Less than two years ago the government introduced high-protein modern bread. Now all major bread companies have followed the example, putting extra protein into their loaves.

Similarly, the government has approved a project that will fortify the specially ground wheat used to make chapattis, the pancake-like bread eaten by most Indians.

Research is under way on strengthing the salt, tea and milk so they can serve as carriers of better nutrition.

Impetus for the program came from the United States Agency for International Development, which set up a special food and nutrition division. The program is an outgrowth of the massive relief effort credited with averting mass starvation deaths during the serious drought in Bihar state three years ago.

Former Student Activist Wife of Federal Minister

By SUSAN BECKER

She's Mrs. Herb Gray today, wife of the new minister without portfolio with special responsibilities in financial affairs. They met at a political convention in 1964 here.

Sharon Gray is a warm and feminine young woman who has packed a lot of learning into her 27 years, confirmed by degrees from three universities.

Mrs. Herb Gray is working on her fourth university degree but finds politics her main interest. (CP photo.)

She's "plodding along" on a fourth, a law doctorate from the University of Ottawa in French, and her thesis is a study of constitutional law as applied to Canada's cultural affairs.

But politics still probably tops her list of interests. She has been interested in the work of the Liberal party ever since her second year in a McGill University course leading to a bachelor of science degree.

"I was spending much of my time in the lab and realized I had very few interests outside of it," the slim, attractive Mrs. Gray said in an interview in the ladies' sitting room on Parliament Hill.

"So I wandered over to a Liberal Club meeting advertised on campus because there were some prominent speakers. I met people and bit by bit became very involved."

It was through the Liberal students' association that she met her husband—already a member of Parliament—at the Ottawa convention.

By then she was in her first year of a law degree, after having sandwiched in bachelor's degrees in both science and arts—the latter from Sir George Williams University.

She had switched her main interest from maths and physics to law because she realized she preferred to work with people and had met a number of lawyers through her political association.

She became active in the McGill students council, becoming its first women president in 1965.

WANTED MORE SAY

"I was considered an activist," she recalls, "although I think I would be considered a moderate today.

"We were demanding a greater say for students. We were upset at the fee increases and wanted student representation on senate committees and such."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sholzberg of Montreal, Sharon helped pay her way through university by working summers in a business office and later as a computer programmer. She was also awarded scholarships.

She was called to the Quebec bar in June, 1967, and a month later was married.

She got a master of laws degree in 1968 from the University of Ottawa, where she studied for it in French. She hopes eventually to teach law.

As well, she has to keep two apartments — one in Ottawa and one in Windsor, Ont., in her husband's riding of Windsor West — comfortable and stocked with groceries, a job she doesn't find easy.

USED TO BE SHY

Soft-spoken and feminine, her brown hair drawn softly back and bound with a bow, she admits she used to be terribly shy and even now gets a little nervous at times in crowds.

"But it goes away when I look at the people as individuals," she says.

She at one time thought of running for Parliament but has given up the idea on the theory that one MP in the family is enough. But she likes attending political functions with her husband and hopes to continue "even if hopefully we have children in the future."

In the dilemma of home versus career, she tries to strike a balance.

"I have never been terribly concerned about women's rights in the sense of fighting for them. Each woman should be free to do as she pleases.

"It can be a very difficult and satisfying job to keep a home and raise children, and the full-time homemaker should be very proud.

"On the other hand, women who want careers should be able to have them without feeling guilty."

U.S. War Dead Lowest In Three Years

SAIGON (AP)—Sixty-five Americans were killed in combat in Vietnam last week, the second lowest weekly toll in three years.

This sent the total of U.S. combat dead in the war to 40,044 since Jan. 1, 1961, but at least 30 more Americans have been killed in action since Saturday.

The U.S. command's weekly casualty summary also reported 477 Americans wounded in action last week, the smallest number in more than two years. This raised the total American wounded to 263,003.

The Saigon government reported 304 of its troops killed in action last week, an increase of 61 over the week before. Government wounded totalled 796, the lowest in two months.

The U.S. command said southern allied forces killed 1,999 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong last week, compared with a revised toll of 1,888 enemy reported slain the previous week.

Soldiers Died In Ceasefire

All commands proclaimed ceasefires both last week for New Year's and the week before for Christmas. But it was virtually impossible to judge with any accuracy how this affected the casualties. American combat dead, for example, totalled 65 last week, 86 during Christmas week, and 66 the week before. The South Vietnamese total was 304 last week, 243 Christmas week and 411 the week before.

In the war today, guerrilla attacks dropped off considerably after two days of heavy fighting in which more than 300 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were reported killed.

Virtually all of the ground fighting reported occurred in the Mekong Delta. South Vietnamese headquarters said government forces killed 60 guerrillas in four clashes in the delta Wednesday. Field reports said one government soldier was killed and 32 were wounded.

The U.S. Command reported 17 guerrilla rocket and mortar attacks between 8 a.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. today, but said only two of them caused casualties or damage.

Army Newscaster Facing Trial

By RICHARD H. PYLE

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Army served court-martial charges today on one of the two soldier newscasters in Vietnam who accused it of censorship. But the army chose an incident in which censorship was not involved.

Specialist Robert Lawrence, 27, of Atlanta, Ga., told a news conference that the charges were based on his refusal Dec. 29 to obey a sergeant's order to stop preparing his nightly newscast and drive some soldiers to their quarters.

Five nights later Lawrence ended his news broadcast on the Armed Forces Vietnam Network by accusing the U.S. command of suppressing unfavorable news. The command suspended Lawrence and marine Cpl. Thomas M. Sinkovitz, 21, of Harrisburg, Pa., who began his sportscast that followed by endorsing Lawrence's charge.

The U.S. command is investigating the broadcasts and has ordered the two soldiers not to discuss the case.

The court-martial charges allege that Lawrence was "disrespectful in language" to Sgt. Robert MacArthur and failed "to go at the prescribed time to his appointed place of duty."

SEEKS LEGAL AID

Lawrence said he refused to take an administrative punishment and asked for a court-martial. He said now that he is involved in two cases, he is seeking "the legal aid of several prominent U.S. attorneys." He mentioned no names.

Lawrence said MacArthur, who was in charge of the network staff at the time, asked him to drive the soldiers home about 8:05 p.m. Dec. 29. He said the sergeant insisted that he drive and refused Sinkovitz's offer to substitute, even though Lawrence told him he "did not have time to drive the truck and fully prepare my television newscast, which had to be completed by 10 p.m."

Lawrence said: "I asked Sgt. MacArthur, 'What is more important, my being duty driver or doing the 11 o'clock newscast:'

"Sgt. MacArthur replied that driving the truck was more important. Sgt. MacArthur then vowed twice that he would see me in Long Binh jail if it's the last thing he ever did, for refusing his request to drive the truck."

Lawrence said his "assigned duty that night was to deliver the television newscast" and he considered MacArthur's order unlawful because it "would interfere with that mission" and "would possibly have resulted in a charge of negligence in the preparation of my newscast."

THERE'S A CONNECTION?

Lawrence asked whether he thought the court-martial was the result of his censorship allegations.

"I would rather that you draw the conclusions yourself on this," he replied. "It probably would be best that I didn't say anything."

A spokesman for the U.S. command said the two incidents "are not directly connected unless he (Lawrence) says they are."

In Sacramento, Calif., the chairman of the House of Representatives subcommittee on government information, Representative John E. Moss (Dem. Calif.), said his committee probably will hold hearings in Vietnam in the next three to six weeks on the censorship charges.

Offer Declined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi has turned down an offer to spend a day observing operations at the United Community Services offices here, saying he has competent people on his staff for that.

HOME GARDEN

Iris Family Varied in Its Type

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

A gardener in Victoria can grow irises to bloom for many months of the year and still not have one of the tall bearded irises we admire during June. The iris family is enormous, and so varied in its type of root systems that at least one can be found for every type of garden.

Some, like the giant bearded irises of June, prefer a sunny open soil of gravelly texture to ensure drainage. Others such as Iris ochroleuca (five to six feet tall) and I. pseudacorus (three feet) like swampy ground and heavy soil. Partially sunny spots are fine for these two, which are also June flowering.

Truly water-loving irises are I. laevigata and I. versicolor.

Early spring irises are mostly bulbous rooted. Among them are such well known types as the Spanish, Dutch and English, blooming from about late April through to early June.

Winter and early spring is the time when we look for some of the most exquisite of all, the Iris reticulata group which includes dainty danfordiae, historioides as well as varieties like Cantab, Joyce, J. S. Dijt.

Some of these are already pushing up their green swather heads, tightly wrapped leaves and flower buds which will not open until a warm sun just happens to reach them at the right stage of development.

Flowers of the reticulata group are jewel-like in their perfect formation and coloring with the bonus of perfume. Only three inches high are the flower stems when blossoms open, so they rarely are damaged by winter weather.

The planting of these small bulbous types needs a bit of consideration, for they appreciate winter sun and winter shelter as well as perfect drainage and summer baking.

Freezing of the soil seems not to affect them, for last year the variety S. J. Dijt opened its buds in the lee of a clump of winter heather while the snow was still on the ground. They do fail to flower some years, but leave them alone, they are busily multiplying to give you more blooms in later years.

The leaves, often a foot high, must be allowed to grow after the flowers are finished.

Another true winter blooming iris, often beginning in November is I. unguicularis, an Algerian native requiring peculiarly right conditions before it will bloom there.

I have seen it well suited with its roots tightly packed into the foundation crack of a wall facing south, though shaded from all sun except the high sun of summer.

Gardeners who succeed in growing this lovely blue iris, so delicate in texture that it seems incredible in winter, should pick the stems as soon as the color shows in the buds.

They will then last several days indoors if not subjected to a hot, dry temperature.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

For many decades, the "squeeze" play was deemed to be a for-experts-only type of play. But with the passage of time, it was demonstrated that the squeeze could be learned by the masses of bridge players. It has now become a part of the public domain.

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♥	3 ♠
4 ♥	Pass	5 ♦	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♥	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

The North-South bidding was quite good. South's five diamond call was a cue-bid, showing the ace of diamonds. When North responded in kind by showing his spade ace, South contracted for the slam in hearts.

After his king of clubs had won the opening lead, West shifted to the queen of spades, dummy's ace taking the trick. The ace and king of trumps then picked up the three outstanding pieces.

As South correctly viewed the situation, West had started with at least five spades. This "fact" was based on West's overcall at the three-level on a suit that was headed by a queen. And it was rather obvious that West possessed the club ace, based on his opening lead of the king.

After drawing trumps, South cashed the king, ace, and queen of diamonds. He next led three trumps. With three tricks remaining to be played, this was the position around the table:

South had the 9-7 of spades and the four of trumps. West had the J-10 of spades and the ace of clubs. Dummy had the K-3 of spades and the club queen.

When South now led his last trump, West was squeezed. If he discarded his ace of clubs, dummy's queen would become a winner, And if, instead, he tossed away a spade, declarer's nine of spades would become declarer's slam-going trick.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Mystery Solved After 200 Years

By BOB BOWMAN

In 1898 W. A. Grant, a lighthouse keeper on Manitoulin Island, Lake Huron, found the wreckage of an old ship. Then six human skeletons were found in a cave along the shore, not far away. It is believed that these discoveries solved a mystery of more than 200 years, the disappearance of La Salle's ship the Griffon.

LaSalle's ship was the first to sail on the Great Lakes west of Niagara. He had gone to Niagara in 1678 to establish a base, but had to snowshoe back to Montreal during the winter because his creditors were pressing him for money. While he was away Henry Tonty directed the building of the Griffon, a ship of about 45 tons, and it was launched in August 1679, when LaSalle had returned.

The Griffon sailed to Michilimackinac, and then down Lake Michigan to Green Bay, the present-day home of the famous football team. There LaSalle loaded the ship with furs and sent it back to Niagara, where the valuable cargo would be carried past the falls, and then sent on to Montreal. That was the last of the Griffon. LaSalle heard the sad news about its loss on January 8, 1680, when he was exploring the Illinois River. It was a cruel blow for him because he needed the money from the furs to pay his debts in Montreal, where he had many enemies who were always trying to put him out of business.

It is not known if the ship was wrecked in a storm, or by enemies who murdered the crew. There was never any trace of the cargo.

LaSalle was murdered later by some of his own men when he was trying to found a colony for France in Louisiana.

Other events on January 8:

1814 — Lord Selkirk's lieutenant, Miles Macdonell, prohibited export of pemmican and other provisions from Red River area.

1879 — First issue of La Gazette d'Ottawa.

1954—World's longest pipeline opened between Alberta and Sarnia, Ontario, a distance of 1,770 miles.

No Rush To Set Up Gambling

By The Canadian Press

There has been no rush to set up organized blackjack in Battle River, sweepstakes in Swift Current or roulette in Rievere du Loup.

Criminal Code amendments effective at the start of the year have placed gambling operations under provincial jurisdiction but a Canadian Press cross-Canada survey indicates the provinces are hedging their bets.

Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart of Alberta planned a trip to Nevada this month to confer with state officials on their gambling operations but other provinces, except for Quebec, seemed largely preoccupied with church bingos and charity raffles.

Gerhart said he plans to use his Nevada research into licensing and control of payoffs to prepare legislation for possible presentation to the next session of the legislature. But there was no indication that Alberta's government plans to institute a Social Credit version of Las Vegas.

Manitoba plans a modest splash to honor its centennial celebrations this year. The legislature has passed a bill setting up the Centennial Sweepstakes, principally organized around the July 15 Manitoba Derby and offering a $70,000 first prize to the ticket-holder who draws the winner.

The Quebec government also took early action, passing legislation last month to set up a corporation to operate lotteries and races.

By April, the corporation expects to be running a monthly provincial lottery with a first prize of at least $200,000 to replace Montreal's voluntary tax scheme, which was struck down by the courts.

The government was also considering an annual sweepstake at a Montreal racetrack and discussing establishment of casinos.

Elsewhere, casinos were generally frowned upon.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson of British Columbia said his province will issue gambling licences only to religious and charitable organizations and plans to restrict them to bingo games "as long as the operations are no more extensive than in the preceding year."

Mr. Peterson said he hopes to obtain agreement with Alberta and Saskatchewan for uniformity of gambling regulations.

In Saskatchewan, Premier Thatcher's office said the province plans no changes in its gambling laws.

Oh! Calcutta! Expires In The Hole

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Money problems have done what city officials were unable to accomplish—close down the Los Angeles performance of the nude musical Oh! Calcutta!

The show at the Fairfax Theatre folded Wednesday after producer Lou Shaw was reported unable to meet the payroll of cast and crew.

Reporters were told that Hilliard Elkins, New York showman who licensed Shaw to produce the revue here, had attached both the box office receipts and the bank account of Shaw Productions on the ground that the producer had failed to pay royalties.

Twice during the five-week run of Oh! Calcutta! Shaw and several key performers were arrested on orders of City Attorney Roger Arnebergh, who contended the play was lewd and obscene.

GRIT-SOCRED MERGER TALKS STALL

EDMONTON (CP) — Jack Lowery of Calgary, Alberta Liberal party leader, said Wednesday alliance talks between his party and the Social Credit League have stalled.

Mr. Lowery said discussions with Premier Harry Strom stalled when "it became evident to me that they (the Social Credit executive) were not prepared to recommend anything that I would recommend to my people."

Lowery's leadership has come under fire from many Alberta Liberals, angry because he had engaged in the talks without consulting the party.

—Ross, Mary and sons.

HILL — In loving memory of Glenn Michael Hill, who passed away Jan. 8, 1966.

I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead — he is just Away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land.
And left us dreaming how very fair.
It needs must be, since he lingers
there,
And you — Oh you, who the wildest yearn
For the old time step and glad return,
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here;
Think of him still as the same, I say:
He is not dead — he is just away!

—Always remembered, Mother, Dad, sister and brother.

ROBB — Henry Ormiston, passed away 8th January, 1969 — Ever remembered by his wife Christine and daughters Nancy and Bobbi.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is a light-hearted comedy, Boing Boing, at 7:30 on Channel 12. Tony Curtis stars as a Paris playboy who has trouble keeping his three finacees from meeting. Jerry Lewis and Dany Saval are featured.

BILL COSBY. 8, Channels 2 and 6. The Elevator Doesn't Stop Here Anymore. Coach Kincaid, a reserved English teacher (Henry Fonda) and the cleaning lady (Elsa Lanchester) are trapped in an elevator between floors. It makes for a few laughs.

FAMILY AFFAIR. 7, Channel 8; 7:30, Channel 7. In case you thought you knew the whole family . . . there's more. Tonight, from out of the blue, a grandfather appears to pay a call on the kids. When the children treat him like a stranger, the old man airs his disappointment. In the windup, we have the traditional warm and loving ending when grandpa (Paul Fix) shows his true colors and wins the brood over.

JIM NABORS SHOW. 8, Channel 7, 9:30, Channel 12. Tennessee Ernie Ford drops by tonight, and he's a very active guest. In a sketch he plays a detective called "Ironbottom," then gets involved in a production number about railroads, and finally settles down for a medley with Nabors and teen-ager Julie Budd. Miss Budd, a semi-regular, sings "Johnny One Note," Jim solos to "Walking Happy," and is full of good cheer when Harry and Blanch reminisce about their honeymoon in the "Brothers-In-Law" segment.

THAT GIRL. 8 Channel 4. "Opening Night." Silly but nevertheless funny outing. The old joke about getting your finger stuck in the faucet is to put to use as it actually happens to our actress-heroine before she's scheduled to make her Broadway debut in a small role. The crisp comedy lines fly fast and furious as boyfriend Don and busybody Dad put their two cents in.

SPECIAL: "A LAST LAUGH AT THE '60s." 9, Channel 4. The big trouble here is not enough time. Practically everything is fun, but the tape we saw ran far too long and was still being edited at press time. Led by host Bob Newhart, a panel looks back on a decade of humor and comments on the emerging black comic, sick jokes, ethnic humorists and "camp" gags. As graphic examples there are items like songs by Mrs. Miller and Tiny Tim; film clips of Lennie Bruce; monologues by Newhart and Mort Sahl; a brilliant film of a Nichols and May sketch about a coffin salesman; Godfrey Cambridge talking about old-timers like Redd Foxx; Allan Sherman with some ethnic tunes; plus Don Adams, Don Rickles and a show that could have run two hours.

DEAN MARTIN. 8:30, Channel 8; 10, Channel 5. Petula Clark and Peter Graves ("Mission: Impossible") are Dean's headliners tonight. In addition to a medley with Dean, cute Petula sings "You and I" and "Don't Sleep in the Subway" on her own. Graves hoofs a bit with the chorus line and kids with the host in a music lesson involving the dancers. Gale Gordon appears in a sketch about a company personnel man in which he's very much the character he portrays on Lucy's show.

UNLIKELY TRIO trapped in an elevator between floors, Henry Fonda (left), Bill Cosby and Elsa Lanchester, offer a few laughs on the Bill Crosby Show tonight at 8 on Channels 2 and 6. (See listing for details.)

DINNER AT HOWARD K. SMITH'S. 10, Channel 4. This review of the news events of 1969 and projection for 1970 features all the top ABC correspondents who were invited to dinner at Mr. Smith's house. Among those on hand for the black-tie meeting will be Jules Bergman, William Lawrence, John Scali, Frank Reynolds, Edward P. Morgan and Tom Jarriel.

Policeman Denies 'Fix'

Documents on Brewery Man's Case Disappear From Department Files

TORONTO (CP)—An inquiry into the conduct of senior officers on the Metropolitan Toronto police force was told Wednesday that Deputy Chief John Murray once shielded a brewery official from conviction on a charge of impaired driving.

Assistant Crown Attorney John Kerr cited Constable Maurice Hodgson, who conducts breath analysis tests, as his source for the charge. Constable Hodgson immediately denied it under questioning from Roy McMurtry, counsel for the deputy chief and 30 other officers implicated.

The inquiry was called to investigate charges by Constable Ian Samuel and former constable Peter Lott that senior officers interfered with impaired driving charges against prominent persons.

Lott has not yet appeared at the inquiry. He was charged Wednesday with failing to obey a suspoena ordering him to appear as a witness.

Before Mr. Kerr made his statements about Deputy Chief Murray, the inquiry was told that all documents related to the case of brewery manager Donald McDougall, 30, now of Edmonton, have disappeared.

Mr. Kerr said Constable Hodgson told him late in 1968 or early in 1969 that chief Murray ordered him not to appear at prosecutions of three of five persons charged with impaired driving, among them Mr. McDougall, then Ontario sales manager for Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd.

He said Constable Hodgson told him he also had orders from the deputy chief not to appear at a hearing for Mr. McDougall Sept. 16, 1968.

'TESTIMONY HEARSAY'

Mr. McMurtry objected that Mr. Kerr's testimony was hearsay and, after an exchange with Austin Cooper, counsel for the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission which is heading the inquiry, he ordered Constable Hodgson to the stand.

Constable Hodgson denied the story and said he did not appear at Mr. McDougall's hearing because he was ill at the time.

Mr. McDougall, who flew in from Edmonton for the inquiry at the commission's request, said in brief testimony that he went to court three times over the charges but each time found no police witnesses on hand.

In other testimony Wednesday, Insp. Harry Fielding confirmed that he once instructed Constable Samuel not to lay a charge against a man the constable had arrested.

Shown a memo from Constable Samuel to the inspector about the arrest of William Henry Gill, Insp. Fielding confirmed that he wrote a reply on it that said:

"Do not issue a summons in this case. Insp. (Jack) Storey will interview this man with a view to removing his licence or having him stop drinking."

Insp. Fielding, who earlier denied ever asking an officer not to lay a charge, said he did not remember the case but he must have instructed Constable Samuel not to lay the charge.

The inquiry continues today.

14 Injured In Toronto Train Crash

By CRAIG ASPINALL

TORONTO (CP) — A major disaster was narrowly avoided Wednesday night when three cars of a CNR passenger train northbound to Sarnia, Ont., jumped the tracks and came to rest in the fuel depot of a Toronto factory.

Fourteen persons were injured, four seriously, when the Tempo train, carrying 125 passengers, hit an open siding switch at the Facelle and Dominion Cellulose Co. Ltd. plant.

The derailment occurred about three miles east of the scene of a similar accident April 20, 1969, in which two men were killed and 30 persons injured on a Sarnia-bound Tempo. That accident was blamed on tampering with a track switch.

John Noel, manager of CNR public relations, asked how the siding switch came to be open Wednesday night, replied:

CONDITION CRITICAL

One of the four persons seriously injured was identified as Laura Strain, 19, of Sudbury, Ont., struck in the abdomen by a piece of tubular fencing which came through a window. It took police about 45 minutes to free her from the wreckage in 10-degree temperatures.

She was listed in critical condition with multiple injuries after a three-hour operation at Northwestern General Hospital.

In fair condition in hospital were Mrs. Grace Vanderborg of Strathroy, Ont., suffering from spinal injuries; Margaret Hyman of Toronto and Linda Scott of Port Elgin, Ont.

3,000 Policemen Surround Hijacker

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — A mild-mannered, 18-year-old Madrid student told police today he had attempted to hijack a Spanish airliner to Albania Wednesday night "because I had taken four cups of cognac and did not know what I was doing."

Mariano Ventura Rodriguez, toting a plastic pistol, ordered the Iberia Flight 032 from Madrid to Zaragoza to fly on to Albania about 10 minutes before the airliner landed here.

The pilot, Luis Arias Bernal, 38, said he would try his best to fly the plane to Albania "provided you do no harm whatsoever to the passengers."

Arias later told reporters the would-be hijacker vowed not to harm anybody. "All I want is to get to Albania and ask for political asylum there since I'm fed up with living in Spain," he quoted the frustrated hijacker as saying.

The pilot immediately radioed the airport authorities and Ventura's attempted hijacking was nipped in the bud.

Soon after the twin-engined Convair airliner with 41 passengers and a crew of four landed, the entire Zaragoza police force—about 3,000 men—plus fire trucks and emergency vehicles, surrounded the craft to prevent it flying on to Barcelona where it was due to refuel before proceeding to Albania.

Ventura, still holding the pistol, threatened to kill everybody aboard if the plane did not leave Zaragoza. He stood by the entrance to the cabin holding the air hostess by his side.

But his temper cooled when all the lights in the airport were turned out and the plane's batteries disconnected.

HOSPITAL OPENS FEB. 2

Martin Institute Viewed

By BOB MITCHELL

It was open house at the Eric Martin Institute of Psychiatry Wednesday as hospital administrators previewed Vancouver Island's newest and largest mental health facility.

Workmen were putting finishing touches to the six-storey building as reporters, led by EMI administrator Cliff Brown and senior nursing administrator Mrs. Norma Friedman, trooped through the silent corridors.

The hospital will open gradually in several phases, and experience gained from operating one floor will be used to open other parts of the hospital.

Phase One Transfer

Phase one will begin a week from today when between 45 and 50 patients from the Royal Jubilee's Bay Pavilion move into the EMI's third floor.

Royal Jubilee chief administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles said Wednesday the move will be welcome because the mental health wing is operating at capacity. He said the pavilion will be integrated into the Royal Jubilee's surgical complex.

During the week Feb. 2-5, 29 multi-handicapped children from Woodlands Hospital in New Westminster will be airlifted to the Eric Martin by armed forces helicopters.

The children, all from Island families, will live on the institute's fifth floor until completion of Glendale Treatment Centre near Royal Oak, expected to open late in 1971 or early in 1972.

Controversy Swirled

Controversy has swirled around the $6 million, 170-bed EMI since completion of major construction last February.

Opposition MLAs tagged it as a "white elephant" and said it suited mental hospital design of the 1950s. In November 15 Victoria psychiatrists sent a list of what they considered to be design defects to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

The hospital was handed over to the Royal Jubilee Sept. 1 last year to be administered on a 10-year lease. In mid-November Loffmark warned administrators if it did not have patients by Jan. 12 the provincial government would take it over again.

During Wednesday's top-to-bottom tour—excluding only the third floor, which is undergoing alterations—administrators were anxious to make sure reporters understood and approved the many aspects of the hospital operation.

The EMI's two main entrances—one for admitting and one for the general public—are off Lee St. Located on the first floor are administration offices, staff lounge, board room and medical library, which is yet to be stocked with books.

Lecture Theatre

An important feature of the first floor is a lecture theatre which will be used as classroom for student nurses. The theatre is equipped for showing films and has a stage and dressing rooms to provide entertainment either by outside groups or patients.

The theatre and hospital pharmacy, run by J. E. Smith and Mrs. Ethel Purdy, were contributed by the Victoria Mental Health Unit.

A 16-channel electroencephalogram machine, also located on the main floor, was described by technician Ken Black as the most advanced of its kind in B.C. The machine acts as an amplifier of electrical impulses emitted by the human brain, and when the impulses are recorded on a graph they can be analysed to determine the nature and extent of illness or damage.

Black said the machine is almost all transistorized, making it so compact it can be wheeled around the hospital to patient areas.

A small room has been reserved in the lobby of the public entrance for the Canadian Mental Health Association, which plans to open a shop to sell sundry items such as flowers.

"Attractive View"

Mounting floor by floor the view south over Juan de Fuca Strait to the Olympic Mountains becomes progressively more attractive.

The second floor includes facilities for electro-convulsive therapy (shock treatment), group therapy, physiotherapy and a servery (eating area).

But the most important feature is a spacious occupational therapy area under the direction of acting supervisor Mrs. Iris Wright.

It includes a pottery room with electric wheel, foot-wheel and kiln; woodworking room with power tools, which patients use to build items like coffee tables and deck chairs; "home assessment unit" or kitchen; and general activity room equipped for painting, sewing, music, etc.

Mrs. Wright also runs a relaxation class where patients learn to relax their muscles—it apparently helps to cope with daily tensions.

The south end of the second floor also has a rooftop garden area complete with covered walkway.

Floors Identical

The third, fourth and fifth floors are all identical. Each will ultimately accommodate 50 patients, 25 at each end, with central cafeterias and day areas.

The sixth and top floor is designed to take 20 paediatric patients. There's an observation area where psychiatrists will be able to watch and counsel parents in their relations with their children.

There's a classroom where youngsters can follow public school courses under guidance of a teacher supplied by the Greater Victoria school board, and a water play area with running water for children to splash around in.

Earlier inspection of the sixth-floor rooftop recreation space brought criticism that youngsters could throw objects over the walls, with the danger of someone below getting injured.

EMI head Brown said Wednesday a net will be stretched over the play area to eliminate the fallout hazard.

Down in the basement the hospital's meals will be taken care of by head dietician Phyllis Laird who oversees an automated stainless steel kitchen.

Mass-prepared meals will be wheeled into service elevators and whisked up to serveries on the five upper floors. Miss Laird said the conveyor belt dishwasher could wash dishes for a single meal in about 45 minutes.

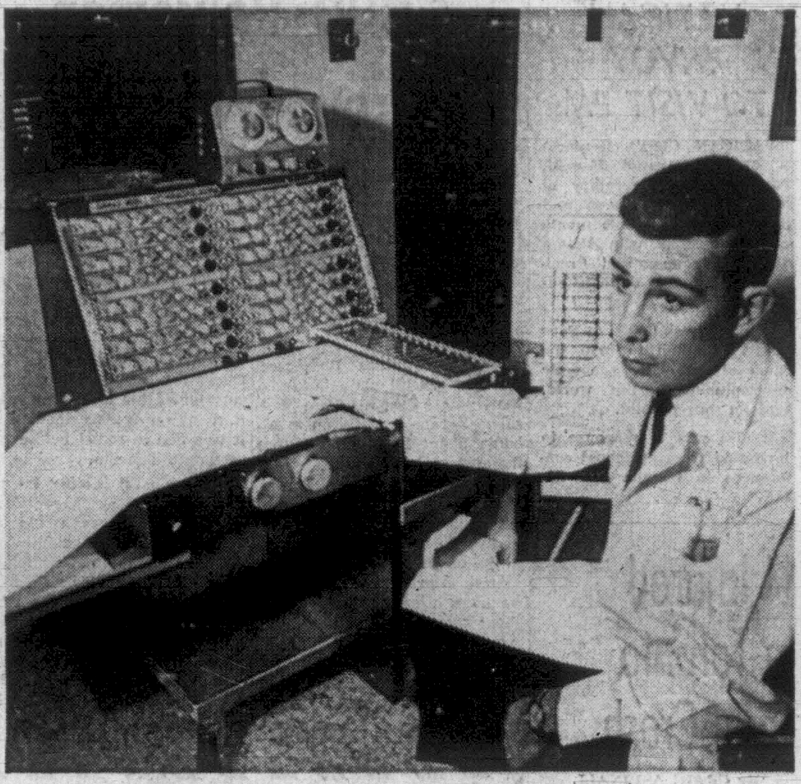
Hospital staff will dine in a cafeteria adjacent to the kitchen.

Head nurse Mrs. Norma Friedman said the hospital will not have the sterile, prison-like atmosphere associated with traditional mental institutions.

No Uniforms

The 100-odd members of the nursing staff will not wear uniforms, but will be identified by a modest badge. Patients will be free (during the day) to move around grounds between the institute and the Royal Jubilee.

"If any patients were in touring you probably wouldn't recognize them," she said.



CHARTING brain wave emissions, technician Ken Black will run Eric Martin Institute's solid state electroencephalogram equipment that is most modern in British Columbia. Once cumbersome machine has been streamlined and sophisticated with transistorized circuits, and now the unit is mobile for more efficient access to patients.

People's Army Set to Fight Pollution Here

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A people's anti-pollution-conservation movement was born Wednesday night.

An audience estimated at 700 jammed a public meeting at the University of Victoria and called for action against the use of phosphate-containing detergents and pollution in general.

The turnout astonished Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson who has launched a nation-wide campaign against phosphate levels in detergents.

He organized the meeting and admitted the large crowd literally "stunned me."

'PEOPLE'S ARMY'

"I had no idea that so many people were aware or understood the dangers of pollution," he said. "This is the beginning of a people's army to stop pollution and to save our land."

About 100 people were turned away because there were no more seats.

To accommodate the crowd, half the audience participated in a panel discussion on detergents in one amphitheatre in the Elliott Building and the other half saw a film on the misuse of land in another amphitheatre across the hall.

Members of the panel included biologist David Hancock, chairman; Anderson; Brian Roberts, a lawyer; Dr. David Groves, a biochemist, and Dr. Alan Austin, a biologist.

ACTION NEEDED

Anderson, who has recently introduced a private member's bill in the Commons that would limit phosphate content in detergents to 2 per cent, said public action is needed to awaken the government for legislation to control the use of phosphates.

Phosphates are building elements which feed algae in lakes and encourages them to multiply. When the algae dies it takes oxygen from the water, killing many forms of life.

The result is a green scum on the lake.

Anderson suggested several ways people might help fight pollution and the use of high levels of phosphate in detergents.

Some of these were:

● Picketing of all supermarkets in town, demanding that the companies print phosphate contents on the box; ● a pollution day to draw attention to the misuse of land, water and air, and ● protest meetings on the grounds of the legislature.

He also suggested that people turn out at the airport or Legislative Buildings when Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Greene arrives in Victoria to discuss the proposed Canada Water Act with Lands and Forests and Resources Minister Ray Williston, probably at the end of the month .

Kiernan Blames Publicity

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

CAMPBELL RIVER — Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan found his "silent majority" here Wednesday night when he downgraded the problems of pollution before 200 members of the Social Credit Comox constituency organization.

Kiernan made no mention of the area's two most potent political issues—the Western Mines tailings' dump at Buttle Lake and the Cape Scott-Strathcona Park land swap.

Instead he charged the news media with distorting the facts about the B.C. pollution problem and declared: "Let's not kid ourselves that we can be free of pollution and still have the high level of development and prosperity in B.C. today."

NOT A QUESTION

A question and answer period followed Kiernan's speech and not one of the 200 people present had a query or a comment.

He admonished the audience to start using their hearts and their heads "or you'll be led down a garden path. It's a mistake to be stampeded by facts in improper perspective.

"Take the open pit or strip mining stories. If you form your opinion by headlines it would appear most of the province is being torn apart.

"In actual fact only 27 square miles is being mined by open pit—so let's keep it in perspective."

ONLY FIVE AFFECTED

He said there are five mountains in B.C. whose shape is being altered by mining.

"There are 10,000 mountains we haven't touched—so let's keep it in perspective."

He said the auto is the most destructive pollutant in our society. The real offenders were not the factories but the automobiles.

"But if you were told to stop driving your car, you

PM Visit Paris? An Impossibility!

PARIS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, vacationing on the ski slopes of the French Alps near Courchevel since Monday, said today he will not visit Paris before returning to Ottawa Sunday because of "diplomatic impossibilities."

Trudeau indicated to reporters that there still exists in the Canadian capital a sour feeling over the refusal by a French official to visit Ottawa during a tour of Quebec province last year.

Turdeau told reporters he had wanted to visit France last year but decided against it.

"It was difficult; the General (Charles de Gualle) was still there. . . ."

NOT SURE

He made little comment on his relations with French President Georges Pompidou, saying only:

"I met him a long time ago. We chatted, but at the moment, I do not exactly know what we could say to one another."

In London, meanwhile, the Evening News says that "fast footwork and fast thinking" by the Canadian embassy in Paris prevented an awkward meeting between Trudeau and Jean de Lipkowski at Orly Airport this week.

ANOTHER REASON

De Lipkowski was in the Paris airport's VIP lounge awaiting the arrival on a different flight of officials from Quebec, The Evening News says.

A meeting between the two men was avoided when the Canadian embassy found a lounge for the prime minister at a nearby airport hotel.

The News says this enabled de Lipkowski to have the airport arrival lounge at his disposal without causing Trudeau to meet the man who possibly was the person he least wanted to see in France.

In Hong Kong, the newspaper China Mail says Trudeau will meet Peking officials in Hong Kong late in May to discuss Canada-Communist China relations.

However, an external affairs department spokesman in Ottawa said Trudeau may stop in Hong Kong after visiting Expo 70 at Osaka, Japan, but that "there are absolutely no plans for political discussions of any nature.

Ray Refused New Trial

In a unanimous opinion, the court said that Ray "willingly, knowingly and intelligently and with the advice of competent counsel entered a plea of guilty to murder in the first degree by lying in wait."

Ray pleaded guilty last March 10 to the 1968 slaying of King in Memphis. Chiminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle sentenced Ray to 99 years in state prison.

Socred Urges Exhaust Device

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social Credit MLA Evan Wolfe (Vancouver Centre) said today he will ask the provincial government to make exhaust emission-control devices mandatory on all new cars sold in British Columbia.

Mr. Wolfe, a Vancouver car dealer, said he would also like to legislate the efficiency of such devices by requiring regular inspections.

Building Trade Facing Shutdown

By JIM HUME

The British Columbia cement workers strike is only the opening salvo in what could be the construction industry's toughest year.

With $25 million in Greater Victoria construction halted or grinding to a halt and a minimum of 1,000 on-site workers nervously eyeing the immediate future, 12 other major unions are gearing for negotiations with management over the next three months.

The effects of the cement workers' strike, now in its fourth week, have been relatively minor until this week.

"But," says Ed Phillips, executive director of the Amalgamated Construction Association local branch, "a total close-down of major jobs now appears inevitable.

"Some of the sub-trades will be able to carry on for a little while, but eventually they will catch up and the whole industry will grind to a halt," Phillips said. "I'd give it another week, maybe 10 days at the most."

Phillips said he could only guess at the number of men enployed on major projects, but would estimate that close to 1,000 "on-site" workers would eventually be affected.

"And I think this is only the start of what could be a very rough year," Phillips said.

Before the end of February, three other major union-management agreements are up for negotiation. They are the laborers' agreement, teamsters and operating engineers.

In March eight agreements, all of vital importance to the industry, are up for negotiation. They affect ironworkers, machinists, boilermakers, electricians, pipefitters, bricklayers, glaziers and sheet metal workers.

This year, for the first time, the industry will be represented at the bargaining table by its new creature—the Construction Labor Relations Association.

Tough, Prolonged Battle

With professional negotiators carrying the fight for management and strong demands from unions, the 12 battles scheduled for the next three months are expected to be the toughest and most prolonged in the construction industry history.

"We'll have to wait and see just how it goes," Phillips said. "But it isn't going to be an easy spring. And, of course, a strike by any one of the 12 would again affect the entire industry."

In Greater Victoria the following jobs are expected to be halted within a few days.

Glendale Hospital ($5.5 million); the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at View and Douglas ($6 million); Phase two of the Hillside Shopping Centre ($3 million); University Heights Shopping Centre ($2.5 million); and the Toronto Dominion Bank at Douglas and Johnson ($5 million).

Also scheduled to run into trouble within the next three weeks is the hardly off the ground new aquatic facility in Central Park.

It is expected that excavation on the site will take between two and three weeks.

Construction experts say that following settlement of the strike it will be at least three weeks before supplies of cement start to move in any volume.

Secrecy Urged For Paris Talks

PARIS (Reuters) — The United States today proposed that the Vietnam peace talks go into restricted and secret sessions. Hanoi and the Viet Cong turned down the idea.

American delegate Philip Habib said secret sessions would enable the talks to "get to grips" with the real issues at stake.

Under present procedure, the prepared statements of all four delegations are issued to the press. Habib's proposal would have had the effect of keeping these secret.

"We had sought to bring an end to the kind of sterile debate that has been going on in the past but the other side is not prepared to agree to our proposal," Habib told reporters after today's 5½-hour session.

INMATES GET 'FIX' WHEN THEY WANT IT

VANCOUVER (CP) — An ex-convict testified in Provincial Court Wednesday that he and other prisoners were able to "fix" with heroin at the British Columbia Penitentiary and the Matsqui Drug Centre.

Tommy Burns, one of two ex-prisoners appearing as defence witnesses for Ronald Soo, said the prisoners were able to fix in their cells or wherever they happened to be working.

Soo, 36, was convicted of possessing heroin for trafficking and will be sentenced Jan. 15.

Both Burns and the other ex-prisoner, Ronald Spence, testified that they knew Soo was an addict while all three were serving time at Matsqui and the penitentiary.

Israeli Jets Pound Arabs

From AP-Reuters

BEIRUT, Lebanon (CP)—Israeli jets swung into action on three Arab fronts today, downing three Syrian planes, striking at Egyptian military targets and pounding guerrilla bases in Lebanon, the Israeli military command said in Tel Aviv.

The Syrian planes, Soviet-made MiG-21s, were intercepted as they tried to attack Israeli positions in the occupied Golan Heights.

In Damascus, Syrian pilots claimed they had shot down two Israeli Mirage fighters in a 10-minute dogfight over Syrian territory today. A military spokesman said three Syrian planes were hit but did not indicate whether they had crashed.

Israel now claims to have shot down 17 Syrian planes since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Other Israeli aircraft flew over the southern and central Suez canal, hammering Egyptian war objectives in two raids lasting a total of almost two hours, the Israelis said.

Planes also swept into southern Lebanon to bomb and strafe Arab guerrilla camps—on the western slopes of Mount Hermon, the military reported. It was the second raid on Mount Hermon in three days.

Israel said its planes returned safely from all missions.

Israeli planes Wednesday flew to within 20 miles of Cairo to bomb a network of military camps in one of the deepest penetrations into Egyptian territory since the six-day war of June, 1967.

REPLACE ARMY CHIEF

The Israeli air attack on Lebanon today came a few hours after Gen. Jean Njeim took over command of the Lebanese armed forces with a mandate to strengthen the security of the border areas, menaced by Israeli reprisal raids.

The 54-year-old general was named Wednesday night to replace Gen. Emil Bustani, who signed the Cairo agreement last November with the Palestine-Arab commandos after a national crisis over the question of their freedom of movement in Lebanon.

Njeim knows the mountainous southern region well. He served for two years, from 1966 to 1968, as commander of the southern military district, which now is being regularly hit by Israeli planes, artillery and raiders in reprisal for commando attacks across the frontier.

Informed sources in the Lebanese capital of Beirut said the switch in the military leadership does not herald a change in the government's attitude toward the Cairo agreement, which ended two weeks of clashes between commandos and security forces in which more than 150 persons died.

But Njeim will be told to enforce more strictly the terms of the agreement, the sources said,

ICY MASS MISSES ISLAND, LOWER MAINLAND

Few Areas Escape Freeze

Times News Services

Vancouver Island, southern coastal B.C., Hawaii and just a few areas of the United States and Canada escaped the winter miseries today.

The remainder of the continent — and Britain as well — was being touched and even hurt by freezing temperatures.

CORONATION WINS

Medicine Hat and Coronation, both in southeastern Alberta, had record low temperatures for Jan. 8 as Arctic air moved into the eastern half of the province.

Medicine Hat had a low of 30 below zero, breaking the previous low for the date of 23 below, set in 1934. Coronation was the cold spot in the province this morning with 31 below, setting a record for the date. The previous record was 29 below, set in 1950.

Hawaii was the only state not touched by freezing temperatures this morning. Sub-zero readings reached across the lower plains states, eastward to New England and westward to the central rockies.

Tourists in Miami saw the thermometer drop near the 30s. Dallas had early-morning readings in the 20s. The east coast had readings in the lower teens and even California had freezing temperatures at higher elevations .

New England and the midwest were really cold.

Chicago had an official temperature of 4 below zero at 2 a.m. But the wind, at 15 miles an hour, sent the apparent temperature — called the chill factor — plummeting to about minus 40 degrees.

Havre, Mont., had the nation's lowest 2 a.m. reading — 23 below zero. The highest in the 48 adjacent states was 57 at Key West, Fla.

The U.S. weather bureau said the chill could be expected to last at least through Friday and possibly into the weekend.

Florida faced the weather with tourists in mink instead of bikinis. Fruit pickers faced the frost and citrus growers used smudge pots to protect their crop.

Britain remained in the grip of a cold snap with transportation in major cities crippled and heat and power supplies cut.

A butcher in Driffield, Yorkshire, found it eight degrees warmer in his refrigerator than in the street.

The temperature was down to one degree in Glasgow — sharpest cold in that Scottish city in 30 years. City buses froze Wednesday night and thousands had to find other means to get home.

CHICAGO (CP) — A strong demand generated by cold weather sent most commodity futures higher on the Board of Trade today. Trade was mixed and active.

The cold weather created a demand for animal feeds, which include corn, oats and meals.

Soybean meal futures bulled ahead nearly 200 points under strong demand from a mixed trade. There followed a small amount of profit taking but prices were strong at the close.

Charges Dismissed

TORONTO (CP) — Three charges against Revenue Properties Co. Ltd. of Toronto of filing false and misleading financial statements in their 1968 annual report were dismissed Wednesday by Provincial Judge S. Tugger Bigelow.

Judge Bigelow reserved judgment to Feb. 9 on a prosecution motion to have a fourth charge of, omitting a statement of source and application of funds filed under a different section of the Ontario Securities Act.

In his six-page judgment Judge Bigelow said it was clear to him that reasonable doubt had been established in favor of the company.

The transaction which brought about the charges, laid by the Ontario Securities Commission, was the sale by Revenue of a parcel of land to Combo Construction Ltd. of Toronto.

The change involves the transfer of all the shares of Alcan Aluminum Corp., its U.S. fabricating subsidiary, to Aluminum Co. of Canada, its Canadian operating subsidiary.

Payment for the U.S. shares has been made to Alcan Aluminium Ltd. by the Aluminum Co. of Canada's issue of additional common shares of its capital. Transfer was effective Jan. 31, 1969.

The parent company said the change in ownership is designed to reflect the growing interdependence of Alcan's North American operations and to provide an improved financial base for the further development of these activities.

Life Insurance Industry Expects More Business

TORONTO (CP) — The cost of life insurance in Canada will probably go up in the coming years but the industry still expects an increase in business in the 1970s.

A survey by the Toronto investment house of Nesbitt, Thomson and Co. Ltd., says increased aggressiveness and a broadening of services will result in annual increases in business between eight and nine per cent for several years.

The company says life insurance business has jumped to $109,000,000,000 at the end of 1969 from $42,800,000,000 in 1959. The increase last year was 6.5 per cent.

The Canadian Life Insurance Association says the recent imposition of new taxes by the federal government on the industry will likely result in either higher premium rates or lower policy dividends.

Giant Mascot

Giant Mascot Mines Ltd. has shipped its 97th nickel-copper concentrate consignment from its Hope mine to Japan.

It was worth $293,000 and was 10 per cent nickel and 5.5 per cent copper. Since shipments began in 1960, some 207,686 tons of concentrates worth $28 million have been sold in Japan.

Saanich To Hold Housing Huddle

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council will hold a freewheeling discussion on housing Monday night.

Conflicting opinions are held by council members as to how involved the municipality should become in housing, and just what it should be doing to encourage it.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. in the municipal hall and is open to the public.

During 1969, housing construction declined in Saanich at a time when the muninipality was calling attention to a housing crisis and establishing a municipal housing committee to tackle the problem.

The municipality ran into several frustrations—most of the year spent in endless meetings about duplexes; a temporary freeze was put on apartments until a planning department study was made public, but council has not adopted the report to date; and the usual problems of the high cost of houses, climbing interest rates and shortage of sewered land.

Building permits were issued for 385 houses—down 85 from the previous year.

This represented a drop of $1.1 million in permit values.

Duplexes increased—55 last year against 33 in the previous year—and apartment suites were slightly ahead, 209 against 196.

The total number of units of accommodation was down—649 last year compared with 699 in 1968.

Another complication in Saanich is that the zoning bylaw is being overhauled. This work has still to be completed before coming to council for attention.

The housing committee has recommended, and council approved, a resolution asking that highest priority be given to providing the framework and zoning which would promote residential development in 1970.

One council member thought this sounded like a "motherhood" motion.

Two other council members said what the resolution really means is that Saanich should get on with the job, and do in 1970 what wasn't done in 1969.

At least one of the frustrations is almost out of the way — for the time being. Only final reading is necessary for a bylaw which will mean that all future duplex construction must first be approved by the rezoning process — and comply with more stringent regulations.

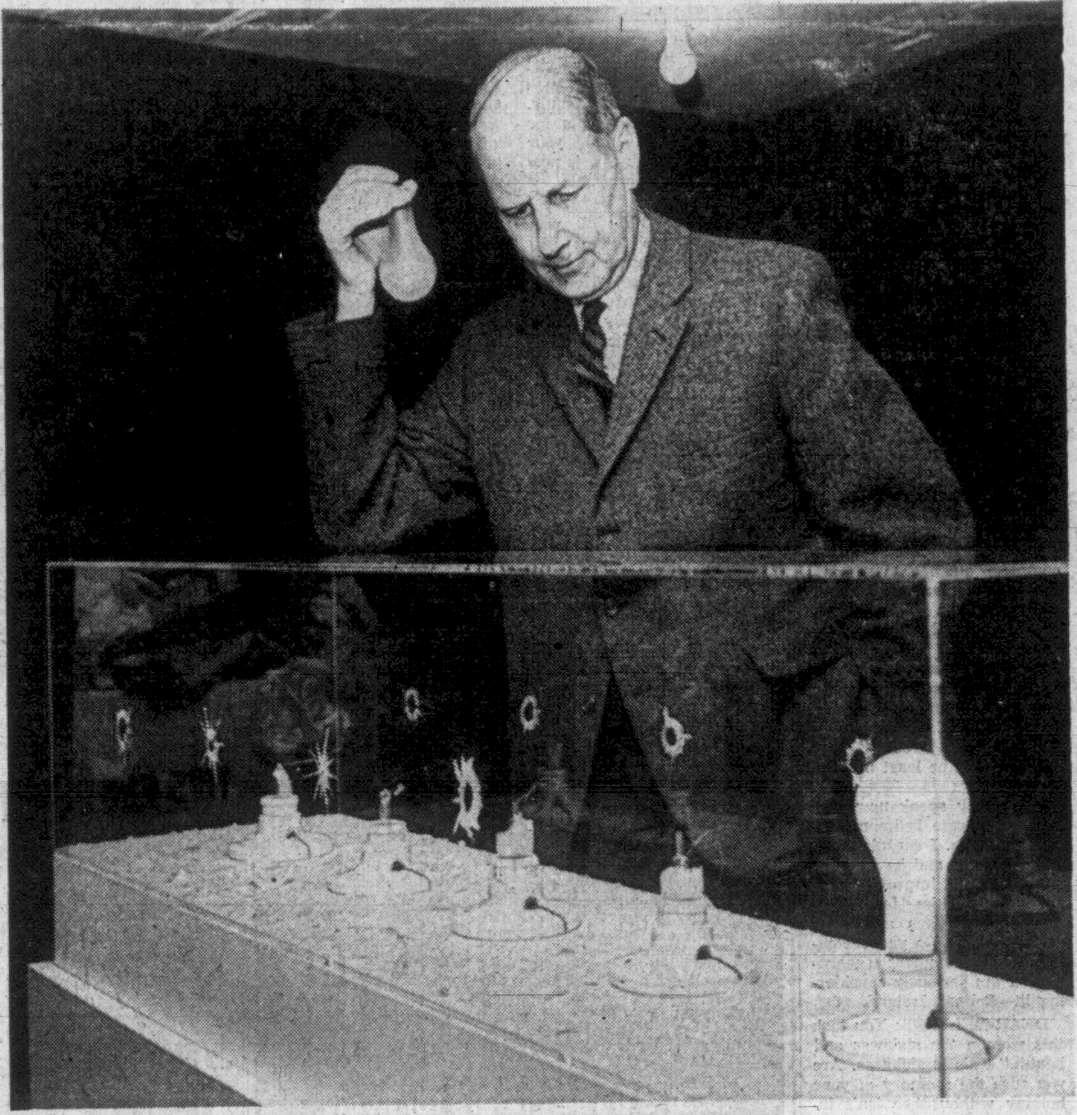
Depending on viewpoint, the move is either to disperse duplexes so rows of them are not built — or make it so tough to get a duplex approved that most builders won't bother.

Another frustration — lack of sewered land — is being overcome with work almost under way on the start of sewering 3,400 acres — three-quarters the size of Victoria city — which Saanich is confident can be done within four years.



READY, IN CASE the last bulb is shot out and, as the artist might say, the world is left in darkness, Colin Graham, curator of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, surveys the gallery's latest acquisition, called "Lights Out." It was given to the gallery by U.S. sculptor Philip McCracken and the bullet-riddled plexiglas case and four shot-out light bulbs are not supposed to be particularly esthetically pleasing — supposed to turn you off, in fact. The piece was produced with overtones of the assassinations of Amerian political leaders. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

Gaglardi Won't Reveal Extent Of Welfare Cuts

Claims Informers Name Lawbreakers

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi today declined to say how many persons have been cut off the welfare rolls for illegal practices since he became minister in October.

"I couldn't give a figure and I wouldn't want to do that," he said, adding that "every day" he gets calls from people telling of welfare recipients who shouldn't be receiving welfare.

Gaglardi had said earlier that such recipients have been "falling like flies" from the welfare rolls.

He said today he knew of one case where an individual was receiving $5,000 a year in income in addition to welfare benefits.

"These are the names I'm after," Gaglardi said in a telephone interview from his Vancouver office.

Asked whether he would reply to criticism of his welfare statements from the Victoria Labour Council and Reg Clarkson, executive secretary of the Victoria Low Income Group, Gaglardi said:

"I have to be responsible to the public. There are millions of dollars being spent in my department and I want to see that we get value for every dollar."

PARTIES AND WHISKY

He said that people don't want him giving away money "for parties and pouring whisky . . ."

As for strong words used by Clarkson in criticizing his view of welfare recipients, Gaglardi said:

"I'm used to people like him making statements about me. He characterizes himself by what he says."

NO ILLUSIONS

Gaglardi said he knows what he is talking about when he refers to welfare recipients.

"I haven't got any illusions," he said. "I'm in a position to pick up both sides of this question."

Since he didn't require any education on what welfare recipients are really like, he doubted he would be attending the Jan. 16 meeting of the Victoria Low Income Group to which he is being invited.

"I have staff people who can handle these matters," he said, adding that he hasn't received any invitation yet. It was to be sent today.

NOT ASKED YET

Gaglardi said he hasn't yet been asked to appear before the Senate committee on poverty in May but indicated he may have something to say if he is asked to appear.

An Ottawa report says provincial welfare ministers will be invited to testify before the committee.

RIGHT, WRONG THING

Gaglardi said he is doing the right thing in trying to get rid of people on welfare who shouldn't be there.

"If doing the right thing is improper then I am improper. If doing the right thing is wrong, then I'm wrong."

'WE ARE UP IN ARMS'

Resignation of Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi was called for Wednesday by Victoria Labor Council because of his "Inhumanitarian approach" to the job.

Delegates passed a resolution arising from an executive committee discussion and framed by IWA delegate Joe Fowler, who said "we are up in arms. I'm up in arms."

He said exception was taken to quoted remarks of the minister relating to elimination of some recipients from welfare rolls. For example, "they're falling like flies," and "deadwood in charitable organizations should be eliminated."

Fowler said Gaglardi "shouldn't be saying these things where human beings are concerened." He deplored the minister's dictatorial attitude.

"If we had a responsible government people wouldn't be put in this predicament," Fowler said.

WEAK RECORD

"When he was minister of highways, his record wasn't very favorable there either," Fowler added.

Delegate Larry Tickner said he thought the council would be overstepping to pass the resolution, which will be forwarded to B.C. Federation of Labor.

He said it was the working class, which the council represents, that elected the Social Credit government in August.

"I don't think it is up to us to go against the working class (which) elected the Social Credit government with a clear majority. It was their will." Tickner said.

He said he was sympathetic to the motion, but perhaps more appropriate action might be to "give the working class 30 lashes with a wet noodle."

BLOOD CLINICS ORGANIZED

Red Cross officials announced today that three blood donor clinics will be held in late January.

The first will be held 2:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 9 p.m. in Red Cross House Jan. 19; the second, 1:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Red Cross House, Jan. 20.

On Jan. 21 clinics will be held in the nurses' residence of Royal Jubilee Hospital from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Inflation Like War Crisis And Getting Worse—Plumbers

Canada's housing and inflation crises may have reached wartime emergency proportions, say the leaders of the national plumbing and mechanical contracting industry.

Harry Briggs of Montreal, and John Long of Toronto, are visiting Victoria as president and executive vice-president, respectively, of the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association.

"The real pressure on our industry in inflation, and that affects all construction," said Briggs in commenting on local reaction to high wage proposals by construction tradesmen.

"If we are forced to give in to our men, we only pass it along to the public and therefore increase the (inflation) spiral.

"Voluntary restraint sounds fine, but is very impractical," he sad.

"I think there should be some price controls at the manufacturer's level," said Long.

When asked whether this might also be impractical and constitute a return to the heavily-administered wartime price controls, Long said: "Maybe that's the kind of emergency we are in now."

Briggs said the government is the worst offender when it comes to spending, and are not showing the country a clear example in restraint.

The two men are making a national tour to visit local and provincial plumbing and mechanical contractor associations, partly to stimulate interest in the work of the association and to get reaction proposals of the federal White Paper on taxation.

The national association is making a formal presentation to the government on taxation, probably by the end of February, and dealing with the effect of White Paper proposals on closely-held companies, capital gains tax, depreciation and capital cost allowances and the effect of intended legislation on the association itself.

The association expects its affiliates to provide some White Paper criticism and urges individual members to submit their own thoughts directly to Finance Minister Benson. "Be constructive," said Briggs. "Even amateurs can come up with good ideas."

Briggs said the association does not oppose a true capital gains tax. But he was of the personal opinion that there should be no tax on theoretical gain and that there should be allowance made for that part lost through inflation.

EASE CURBS

Investment limitations should be eased to enable companies to make provision for income reserves that would cover potential losses in a bad construction year or because of extended strikes.

Taxation of small businesses in the same way as larger ones, as proposed, would be especially hard on the majority of members in the association, said Long. He said 62 per cent of all plumbing and mechanical contracting work in the industry is done by a small minority (about 160) of the 6,000 members, while the rest account for less than $100,000 each, per year.

BRIGGS
. . . need price control

On rising costs in the industry, especially labor, Long said the government can be of help in bringing balance back to the bargaining table by providing at the provincial level for accreditation of associations of industry with bargaining powers to match those of unions.

Only in Quebec is this possible at present, he said.

He also felt the establishment of labor courts would solve the dilemma felt in industry when a union rejects economic arguments against wage increases.

Chargex Sparks Labor Difference

Victoria Labor Council Wednesday found itself at odds with Canadian Labor Congress over its protest that Chargex helps to inflame inflation.

A month ago the council wrote to the CLC suggesting that the bank-sponsored credit plan was not in the best interests of the working people and was heating up the economy unduly.

The council also suggested the CLC discuss Chargex with the prices and incomes commission to see whether it is an inflationary factor.

"Obviously we took the wrong line," commented VLC secretary Larry Ryan after reading a reply from CLC secretary-treasurer William Dodge, who said the CLC research department found that to restrict credit now would only increase the degree of restraint in the economy.

Dodge said this conflicts with CLC's position that the government "should now seriously consider moderating the present degree of restraint" as Canada had entered or was about to enter a period of recession.

More restraint would only restrict output and employment further, the CLC said.

Diphtheria Shots Urged By City Health Official

Whitbread made the statement following reports on the ninth diphtheria case in less than a month in the B.C. Interior. One case was at Hazelton, the others at Burns Lake. A three-year-old girl died.

CHECK WITH DOCTOR

Whitbread said parents should check with their family doctors or with their closest public health offic. Health offices are listed in the telephone directory yellow pages.

"I'm sure most children are up to date with their shots," Whitbread said. "but those who are not should be brought up to date immediately either via their own doctor or at the nearest clinic."

Symptoms of diphtheria are a sore throat, headache, temperature, difficulty in breathing and the appearance of a whitish membrane in the throat.

Even the Coffee Getting Inflated

About five Victoria area restaurants have raised the price of coffee from 15 to 20 cents a cup and more are expected to follow suit soon.

Victoria Restaurant Association President Bill Webb said today a general increase to 20 cents is in effect in Vancouver.

"Prime factors contributing to the increase are labor costs and an increase in coffee prices. We've made inquiries and have found that the trees were damaged by frost and many killed by the drought which followed. Others have been planted but it will be 1½ years before they start producing."

He added that a 10 per cent increase in the cost of dishes, cutlery and coffee-making machines that went into effect Dec. 1 also helped force the price up.

MAYOR ELFORD HAS told Oak Bay residents that if they disapprove of secret council meetings, they can let their municipal government know. I trust the Tweedies will accept this challenge with a roar that will be heard even unto Esquimalt, which has also seen fit to persist in the closed-door policy.

Not for all of each meeting, mind. But the two councils mean to decide what portion of their deliberations should be heard by press.

The council that goes in for this brand of censorshhip makes itself automatically suspect. In enlightened government circles this fact is recognized, and the reporters are permitted to retain in confidence matters that demand confidential treatment until resolved.

Where this practice isn't followed, it's natural to wonder why.

Is the in-camera meeting decreed merely to shield mayors and aldermen from the criticism that some piece of mistaken judgment, high-handedness or even plain fat-headedness might draw from a disapproving public?

Mayor Young of Esquimalt failed to state the entire proposition when he said in a recent press statement, "We're elected to govern the people and if they feel we're doing something wrong, they can throw us out of office at the next election."

Elected to govern, true; but not under a cone of silence. Insistence on so doing could result in the throwing-out to which his worship refers.

HERE AND THERE IN this January town, gardeners are already planning what they'll plant when comes the jolly springtime. As one of them, I'm intrigued by a Washington Post piece on new varieties of vegetable and flower that may be available.

The list includes a deep rose giant early-flowering morning glory, double geraniums that can be grown from seed, a hybrid, multi-colored snapdragon called "Madame Butterfly," and of all things, a yellow beet.

I find it hard to envision a yellow beet, and the story claims that "Burpee's Golden" has to be seen to be believed.

Says originator Burpee, who heads the American seed company that bears his name:

"The golden, tender roots are delicious. They do not bleed like red beets, and the luscious green tops taste better than spinach."

In case that toothsome description hasn't wakened the gardener in you, here also is a medal-winning hybrid cherry tomato. It goes by the name of "Small Fry," and provokes a veritable rhapsody. We're told its yield ripens much earlier than that of the regular cherry tomato, that it grows to a height of about 30 inches, and that it bears clusters of seven or eight one-inch bright red orbs.

"Small Fry" should appeal to balcony and patio gardeners," runs the script, "because it can be grown in tubs and pots."

Very nice, and I hope all these newcomers will be available in Canada. Especially those yellow beets whose tops taste better than spinach.

As what even halfway edible green doesn't!

EACH CHRISTMAS EVE, I've offered a set of holly-bordered verses instead of a column, and putting modesty aside, let me report that the last poem brought me some fan mail.

The first letter comes from R. Lamont.

"In Times Dec. 24 read your gibberish about Joseph being old and grey to father Jesus. In the first place God was the father of Jesus. In the second place Joseph was a young man at the time, for Jesus' brothers and sisters were born after him and not converted till He rose from the dead, and they gave Him a hard time as the saved are today in this sin-cursed world."

And from Mrs. Vera Milan, 1035 Richmond Avenue, to the Times:

"On Dec. 24 you had a poem by Arthur Mayse in your paper. Who is Arthur Mayse and who is Hippon the Greek? I would be grateful for the information.

By way of answer, I've never been entirely sure who the first-named party is. But Hippon, whose name means "horseman," turned up in my head a couple of months ago, and insisted on insinuating his shrewd presence into one of the lovelier, if unscriptural, legends of the Christ-child.

As for Joseph, who knows? I can but cite scholarly opinion that his earthly children were born of a first marriage, that Mary was his second wife, that he died before Christ began his ministry, and that he is often portrayed as a man well-advanced in years.

By SUZANNE CRONJE

The London Observer

LONDON — A new peace initiative in the Nigerian civil war may be attempted this weekend on the occasion of the national day of Cameroun.

Cameroun's President Ahmadou Ahidjo, who is the current chairman of the Organization of African Unity is reported to have invited both the Nigerian and Biafran leaders to attend the celebrations. Other important visitors expected are the secretary-general of the United Nations, U Thant, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, who is chairman of the OAU consultative committee on Nigeria, David Newsome, U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, and Maurice Foley, a junior British minister who usually handles Nigerian matters.

Biafran sources in London have been unable to confirm the invitation to Biafra, but it is thought unlikely that Biafran leader Gen. Odumegwu himself would be able to attend while his breakaway country is under heavy pressure from Nigerian troops. A truce is unlikely despite Emperor Haile Selassie's New Year appeal for a cease-fire of at least a week. The Nigerian leader, Gen. Yakubu Gowon, said recently that a cease-fire or truce "will come at our time and on our conditions."

Nevertheless, recent diplomatic efforts may bear some fruit. U Than'ts three-week West African tour will end on Jan. 19 in The Ivory Coast, which has recognized Biafra and is thus in a position to inform the secretary-general of the Biafran point of view. It is probable that he will meet senior Biafrans in Amidjan, The Ivory Coast capital, despite Biafra's rejection this week of his appeal to the Biafran leadership for "magnanimity" in agreeing to negotiate on the basis of the OAU resolution calling for a cease-fire and negotiations designed to preserve Nigerian unity. The Biafran reply to Thant said that his appeal was "meddlesome" and tantamount to a demand for surrender without prior guarantees of Biafran security.

But it is still possible that some formula might be found as a basis for talks, particularly since the views of the British and American representatives who are being sent to Cameroun still carry some weight in Lagos. U Thant is under pressure to act since the Dutch government last month promised the Dutch parliament to take the issue to the Security Council.

Moreover, Thant's visit to The Ivory Coast will coincide with a debate in the Sierra Leone parliament on the possible recognition of Biafra. Siaka Stevens, the Sierra Leone prime minister, said this week that feelings in his country on the war were very strong and that the decision on recognition would be taken before the end of the month.

Stevens, who handled the preparations for the abortive peace meeting which was scheduled to take place in Addis Ababa last month, also said that he had stressed in letters to the two sides that "The OAU resolution should not be allowed to stand in the way of negotiations" because both Nigeria and Biafra had agreed to talk without preconditions.

Gen Ojukwu claimed that he had been assured that talks would take place outside the context of the OAU—a matter of some importance since the failure of last month's peace attempt was due to confusion over this very point.

The Sierra Leone attitude will therefore have some bearing on next week's efforts to bring the two sides together, particularly since Emperor Haile Selassie is expected in Sierra Leone on Jan. 15.

Stevens says hhe believes it would de "a pity" if Nigeria were to succeed in the current military offensive since a victory could not solve the conflict: "African wars are not like European wars; in Africa if one side wins the losers just vanish into the bush and carry on."

The Nigerian war therefore seems likely to take one of three courses: political settlement during early peace talks; a failure of the current Nigerian offensive, in which case the situation may remain unresolved for many more months; a Nigerian victory followed by a long disruptive guerrilla war.

The congregation in West Africa during the next few days of top-level representatives from Africa, the United Nations, Britain and the United States may provide a chance of achieving the first of these developments—a peaceful solution of the conflict.

Moon Samples Undermine Old Theories of Origin

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The moon may have formed from a mineral-laden cloud boiled away from the earth in primordial times, an Australian scientist says.

Dr. A. E. Ringwood of the Australian National University said Wednesday his studies of Apollo 11 moon samples make "the traditional theories of the moon's origin look very, very shaky right now."

In his presentation to a lunar science conference, he suggested the moon may have formed when the sun boiled away earth minerals, forming "a massive primitive atmosphere." The atmosphere dissipated and cooled. Silicates formed a mass of small bodies orbiting earth. These later united to become the moon.

The theory was attacked immediately by two other scientists.

Dr. Donald Wise of the University of Massachusetts said the moon could not be in its present orbit if it had formed from a sediment ring about the earth.

FINDS IT IMPOSSIBLE

Dr. John O'Keefe of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said that it was not possible for such a cloud of minerals to have generated enough velocity to have gone into orbit around the earth.

The three traditional theories of the moon's origin state:

—It was a body moving through space which was captured by the earth's gravity.

—It formed in the same way and at the same time, but apart from, the earth.

—It is a great chunk of earth which was spun or thrown into orbit by an explosion.

"I think it's too early to judge any of the theories," Wise said. "All of them have their Achilles heels."

Wise said he favors the concept of the moon coming from the earth.

Yugoslav Blood Feud Claims Another Man

PRIZREN, Yugoslavia (AP) — For three years the Taci family stayed indoors to escape the vengeance of the Mazreku family. Then Becir Taci ventured out to the family's vineyard—and lost his life.

The two families live in the village of Mamusi, near this southern Yugoslav town. Three years ago, some of the Taci clan killed two of Saban Mazreku's sons. Under the tradition of this part of the Balkans, the killing entitled the Mazrekus to two Taci lives.

The 180 members of the Taci clan confined themselves to their homes in an attempt to stay alive. They denied themselves all normal outside activities. The children were not allowed to go to school.

But on the last day of 1969, 23-year-old Becir Taci believed the Mazrekus were busy preparing for the New Year holiday.

He decided it was safe to take a look at the family's neglected vineyard, to see what could be done to save it from ruin.

While the young man was there, word got to the Mazreku family.

Saban, now 65, got a German machine-gun he had hidden away and went to the vineyard. He fired 18 rounds point-blank into Beeir.

The killing was a setback to efforts officials had been making to reconcile the Taci and Mazreku families and to end the vendetta code that blood must be repaid with blood.

The district judge ordered six members of the Mazreku family arrested, but other townspeople say there will be no peace until the Mazrekus kill a second Taci and avenge Saban's other dead son.

People's Army Set to Fight Pollution Here

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A people's anti-pollution-conservation movement was born Wednesday night.

An audience estimated at 700 jammed a public meeting at the University of Victoria and called for action against the use of phosphate-containing detergents and pollution in general.

The turnout astonished Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson who has launched a nation-wide campaign against phosphate levels in detergents.

He organized the meeting and admitted the large crowd literally "stunned me."

"I had no idea that so many people were aware or understood the dangers of pollution," he said. "This is the beginning of a people's army to stop pollution and to save our land."

About 100 people were turned away because there were no more seats.

To accommodate the crowd, half the audience participated in a panel discussion on detergents in one amphitheatre in the Elliott Building and the other half saw a film on the misuse of land in another amphitheatre across the hall.

Members of the panel included biologist David Hancock, chairman; Anderson; Brian Roberts, a lawyer; Dr. David Groves, a biochemist, and Dr. Alan Austin, a biologist.

ACTION NEEDED

Anderson, who has recently introduced a private member's bill in the Commons that would limit phosphate content in detergents to 2 per cent, said public action is needed to awaken the government for legislation to control the use of phosphates.

Phosphates are building elements which feed algae in lakes and encourages them to multiply. When the algae dies it takes oxygen from the water, killing many forms of life.

The result is a green scum on the lake.

Anderson suggested several ways people might help fight pollution and the use of high levels of phosphate in detergents.

Some of these were:

- Picketing of all supermarkets in town, demanding that the companies print phosphate contents on the box.
- A pollution day to draw attention to the misuse of land, water and air.
- Protest meetings on the grounds of the legislature.

He also suggested that people turn out at the airport or Legislative Buildings when Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Greene arrives in Victoria to discuss the proposed Canada Water Act with Lands and Forests and Resources Minister Ray Williston, probably at the end of the month.

Kiernan Blames Publicity

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

CAMPBELL RIVER — Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan found his "silent majority" here Wednesday night when he downgraded the problems of pollution before 200 members of the Social Credit Comox constituency organization.

Kiernan made no mention of the area's two most potent political issues—the Western Mines tailings' dump at Buttle Lake and the Cape Scott-Strathcona Park land swap.

Instead he charged the news media with distorting the facts about the B.C. pollution problem and declared: "Let's not kid ourselves that we can be free of pollution and still have the high level of development and prosperity in B.C. today."

NOT A QUESTION

A question and answer period followed Kiernan's speech and not one of the 200 people present had a query or a comment.

He admonished the audience to start using their hearts and their heads "or you'll be led down a garden path. It's a mistake to be stampeded by facts in improper perspective.

"Take the open pit or strip mining stories. If you form your opinion by headlines it would appear most of the province is being torn apart.

"In actual fact only 27 square miles is being mined by open pit—so let's keep it in perspective."

ONLY FIVE AFFECTED

He said there are five mountains in B.C. whose shape is being altered by mining.

"There are 10,000 mountains we haven't touched—so let's keep it in perspective."

He said the auto is the most destructive pollutant in our society. The real offenders were not the factories but the automobiles.

"But if you were told to stop driving your car, you

PM Visit Paris? An Impossibility!

PARIS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, vacationing on the ski slopes of the French Alps near Courchevel since Monday, said today he will not visit Paris before returning to Ottawa Sunday because of "diplomatic impossibilities."

Trudeau indicated to reporters that there still exists in the Canadian capital a sour feeling over the refusal by a French official to visit Ottawa during a tour of Quebec province last year.

Turdeau told reporters he had wanted to visit France last year but decided against it.

"It was difficult; the General (Charles de Gualle) was still there. . . ."

He made little comment on his relations with French President Georges Pompidou, saying only:

"I met him a long time ago. We chatted, but at the moment, I do not exactly know what we could say to one another."

In London, meanwhile, the Evening News says that "fast footwork and fast thinking" by the Canadian embassy in Paris prevented an awkward meeting between Trudeau and Jean de Lipkowski at Orly Airport this week.

ANOTHER REASON

De Lipkowski was in the Paris airport's VIP lounge awaiting the arrival on a different flight of officials from Quebec, The Evening News says.

A meeting between the two men was avoided when the Canadian embassy found a lounge for the prime minister at a nearby airport hotel.

The News says this enabled de Lipkowski to have the airport arrival lounge at his disposal without causing Trudeau to meet the man who possibly was the person he least wanted to see in France.

In Hong Kong, the newspaper China Mail says Trudeau will meet Peking officials in Hong Kong late in May to discuss Canada-Communist China relations.

However, an external affairs department spokesman in Ottawa said Trudeau may stop in Hong Kong after visiting Expo 70 at Osaka, Japan, but that "there are absolutely no plans for political discussions of any nature.

Cement Dry-Up, Wage Pacts Blamed

By JIM HUME

The British Columbia cement workers strike is only the opening salvo in what could be the construction industry's toughest year.

With $25 million in Greater Victoria construction halted or grinding to a halt and a minimum of 1,000 on-site workers nervously eyeing the immediate future, 12 other major unions are gearing for negotiations with management over the next three months.

The effects of the cement workers' strike, now in its fourth week, have been relatively minor until this week.

"But," says Ed Phillips, executive director of the Amalgamated Construction Association local branch, "a total close-down of major jobs now appears inevitable.

"Some of the sub-trades will be able to carry on for a little while, but eventually they will catch up and the whole industry will grind to a halt," Phillips said. "I'd give it another week, maybe 10 days at the most."

Phillips said he could only guess at the number of men enployed on major projects, but would estimate that close to 1,000 "on-site" workers would eventually be affected.

"And I think this is only the start of what could be a very rough year," Phillips said.

Before the end of February, three other major union-management agreements are up for negotiation. They are the laborers' agreement, teamsters and operating engineers.

In March eight agreements, all of vital importance to the industry, are up for negotiation. They affect ironworkers, machinists, boilermakers, electricians, pipefitters, bricklayers, glaziers and sheet metal workers.

And in April the carpenters go to bat for their 1970 demands.

This year, for the first time, the industry will be represented at the bargaining table by its new creature—the Construction Labor Relations Association.

Tough, Prolonged Battle

With professional negotiators carrying the fight for management and strong demands from unions, the 12 battles scheduled for the next three months are expected to be the toughest and most prolonged in the construction industry history.

"We'll have to wait and see just how it goes," Phillips said. "But it isn't going to be an easy spring. And, of course, a strike by any one of the 12 would again affect the entire industry."

In Greater Victoria the following jobs are expected to be halted within a few days.

Glendale Hospital ($5.5 million); the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at View and Douglas ($6 million); Phase two of the Hillside Shopping Centre ($3 million); University Heights Shopping Centre ($2.5 million); and the Toronto Dominion Bank at Douglas and Johnson ($5 million).

Also scheduled to run into trouble within the next three weeks is the hardly off the ground new aquatic facility in Central Park.

It is expected that excavation on the site will take between two and three weeks.

Construction experts say that following settlement of the strike it will be at least three weeks before supplies of cement start to move in any volume.

Secrecy Urged For Paris Talks

PARIS (Reuters) — The United States today proposed that the Vietnam peace talks go into restricted and secret sessions. Hanoi and the Viet Cong turned down the idea.

American delegate Philip Habib said secret sessions would enable the talks to "get to grips" with the real issues at stake.

Under present procedure, the prepared statements of all four delegations are issued to the press. Habib's proposal would have had the effect of keeping these secret.

"We had sought to bring an end to the kind of sterile debate that has been going on in the past but the other side is not prepared to agree to our proposal," Habib told reporters after today's 5½-hour session.

Israeli Jets Pound Arabs

BEIRUT, Lebanon (CP)—Israeli jets swung into action on three Arab fronts today, downing three Syrian planes, striking at Egyptian military targets and pounding guerrilla bases in Lebanon, the Israeli military command said in Tel Aviv.

The Syrian planes, Soviet-made MiG-21s, were intercepted as they tried to attack Israeli positions in the occupied Golan Heights.

In Damascus, Syrian pilots claimed they had shot down two Israeli Mirage fighters in a 10-minute dogfight over Syrian territory today. A military spokesman said three Syrian planes were hit but did not indicate whether they had crashed.

Israel now claims to have shot down 17 Syrian planes since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Other Israeli aircraft flew over the southern and central Suez canal, hammering Egyptian war objectives in two raids lasting a total of almost two hours, the Israelis said.

SECOND RAID

Planes also swept into southern Lebanon to bomb and strafe Arab guerrilla camps on the western slopes of Mount Hermon, the military reported. It was the second raid on Mount Hermon in three days.

Israel said its planes returned safely from all missions.

Israeli planes Wednesday flew to within 20 miles of Cairo to bomb a network of military camps in one of the deepest penetrations into Egyptian territory since the six-day war of June, 1967.

The Israeli air attack on Lebanon today came a few hours after Gen. Jean Njeim took over command of the Lebanese armed forces with a mandate to strengthen the security of the border areas, menaced by Israeli reprisal raids.

The 54-year-old general was named Wednesday night to replace Gen. Emil Bustani, who signed the Cairo agreement last November with the Palestine-Arab commandos after a national crisis over the question of their freedom of movement in Lebanon.

FAMILIAR GROUND

Njeim knows the mountainous southern region well. He served for two years, from 1966 to 1968, as commander of the southern military district, which now is being regularly hit by Israeli planes, artillery and raiders in reprisal for commando attacks across the frontier.

Informed sources in the Lebanese capital of Beirut said the switch in the military leadership does not herald a change in the government's attitude toward the Cairo agreement, which ended two weeks of clashes between commandos and security forces in which more than 150 persons died.

But Njeim will be told to enforce more strictly the terms of the agreement, the sources said.

ICY MASS MISSES ISLAND, LOWER MAINLAND

Few Areas Escape Freeze

Times News Services

Vancouver Island, southern coastal B.C., Hawaii and just a few areas of the United States and Canada escaped the winter miseries today.

The remainder of the continent — and Britain as well — were being touched and even hurt by freezing temperatures.

CORONATION WINS

Medicine Hat and Coronation, both in southeastern Alberta, had record low temperatures for Jan. 8 as Arctic air moved into the eastern half of the province.

Medicine Hat had a low of 30 below zero, breaking the previous low for the date of 23 below, set in 1934. Coronation was the cold spot in the province this morning with 31 below, setting a record for the date. The previous record was 29 below, set in 1950.

Hawaii was the only state not touched by freezing temperatures this morning. Sub-zero readings reached across the lower plains states, eastward to New England and westward to the central rockies.

Tourists in Miami saw the thermometer drop near the 30s. Dallas had early-morning readings in the 20s. The east coast had readings in the lower teens and even California had freezing temperatures at higher elevations.

New England and the midwest were really cold.

Chicago had an official temperature of 4 below zero at 2 a.m. But the wind, at 15 miles an hour, sent the apparent temperature — called the chill factor — plummeting to about minus 40 degrees.

Havre, Mont., had the nation's lowest 2 a.m. reading — 23 below zero. The highest in the 48 adjacent states was 57 at Key West, Fla.

The U.S. weather bureau said the chill could be expected to last at least through Friday and possibly into the weekend.

Florida faced the weather with tourists in mink instead of bikinis. Fruit pickers faced the frost and citrus growers used smudge pots to protect their crop.

Britain remained in the grip of a cold snap with transportation in major cities crippled and heat and power supplies cut.

A butcher in Driffield, Yorkshire, found it eight degrees warmer in his refrigerator than in the street.

The temperature was down to one degree in Glasgow — sharpest cold in that Scottish city in 30 years. City buses froze Wednesday night and thousands had to find other means to get home.
